

750th Contact, Saturday, 22nd of August, 2020, 00:17

Billy Ah, there you are; greetings and welcome, my friend.

Ptaah Greetings to you too, Eduard, dear friend. I am simply bothered by what that part of the responsible terrestrial specialists – which they want to be, but are not – is spreading concerning the rampantly spreading corona disease, with big and self-important words, as important ‘information’, although they only have little knowledge and do not know the real facts of the whole thing. This, while the other part, which is actually concerned with all the facts and contexts and recognises and correctly assesses these as well as the precarious state of affairs, is not being listened to or its findings and cognitions are not taken seriously. However, this is not only the case in the circles of medical, virological, epidemiological and other specialists experienced with rampantly spreading diseases, but also among governors and heads of authorities and health organisations and so forth, among which the main speakers are those who distinguish themselves with their lack of cognisance and unknown knowledge and craving for recognition. This is while those who have gained good cognitions and knowledge are not listened to, or they are silenced and prohibited from expressing their expertise.

It is simply alarming how undiscerning many terrestrial human beings are, because one of my views into the future shows more and more disaster which will be brought about in the coming times due to the unintellect and irrationality of about one quarter of the terrestrial humanity. Indeed, this quarter corresponds to a minority of the total mass of the terrestrial overpopulation, but this minority is fully prepared to act with Gewalt (“There is no English word that conveys the true meaning of the German word ‘Gewalt’. ‘Gewalt’ is the brutal execution of elemental might and force, but it is far above all might and all force. ‘Gewalt’ exists in different and relative forms, one example being a ‘gewalttätige Gesinnung’ – expression from the character, personality, thoughts, feelings and emotions that shows the inclination to act with Gewalt. When human beings possess or carry out acts of Gewalt and it is not based in logic, then this usually involves violence, brutality, degradation and is terribly destructive.” (Meier, BEA 2010, The Goblet of Truth, page XIII, footnote), which is already proving itself in the USA and will also already soon prove itself in Europe. The rampantly spreading corona-disease-pandemic and the conspiracy theories arising from it as well as the enactment of necessary protective measures against the disease, will already, within a few days, be used as a justification for carrying out right-wing demonstrations and acts of Gewalt. Thereby right-wing extremists, ‘citizens of the Reich’ and conspiracy theorists will come together and incite the large masses of the simple-minded ones and those of low intelligence who participate in demonstrations and they will mislead them into carrying out disgraceful acts.

Billy It will probably not be possible to change this if you say that you already know this from looking into the future. But also, that part of the virologists who pretend to be well-informed but do not recognise what is really going on is no better.

Ptaah Many virologists, medical professionals, epidemiologists and so forth are incapable of recognising that the rampantly spreading corona disease virus is constantly changing in its mode of action and that it is beginning to spread in a new variation to younger ages under 40 and to adolescents and children and already has various characteristics that are still absolutely unknown to all terrestrial corona researchers.

As I already told you on August 5th, the number of those infected with the rampantly spreading corona disease will exceed 27 million by the end of this month, but due to a miscalculation, this will not be officially announced until 7 days later. However, by the end of the coming month of September, the number of infected ones with Corona will increase very much further and officially already far exceed 32 million, while the number of fatalities will also increase dramatically and will also exceed the first million quickly and by far before the end of the coming month of September.

Therefore I repeat that it will now be as I said, that in a few weeks the death toll of the rampantly spreading corona disease will increase to such an extent that already in a few weeks’ time the number of victims worldwide will have reached more than one million, which will be the case by the end of the following month of September. And as I also explained earlier, the rampantly spreading corona disease is now claiming tens of thousands of infections and deaths also in all countries of Europe. However, also especially India, Brazil and all other countries of the world are increasingly affected. This is the case because now the spreading wave is rising to its full size, spread and strength worldwide, still as a 1st wave, although it is still not understood that this is not a 2nd wave, which can still be pending at a later time. But from now on the recklessness by those responsible ones of the states will take its toll who, on the one hand, have decreed a lockdown that is only halfway effective and then irresponsibly lifted it again, after a largely useless implementation, due to commercial pressure, economic desires and various other shortcomings as well as due to the populations’ quarrels.

What has happened so far all over the world regarding the rampantly spreading corona disease was only the beginning of the whole thing, because now the corona wave, which already started last year, is really rolling off and rising to its peak and will continue to roll until it has largely run its course, which, however, will not be the final end, because at least its danger will continue to exist. Even countries where it is assumed that they have survived the worst will again be affected by the rampantly spreading disease, which will again lead to many deaths. In addition, even after it has subsided, and even years and decades later, the rampantly spreading disease can continue to claim infections and fatalities, on the one hand, directly by the rampantly spreading corona disease, which can break out again and again, even in convalesced corona patients, but, on the other hand, also by other diseases, which, due to corona influences, can cause completely different corona-related diseases. All this, while otherwise in the future also women who have recovered from the rampantly spreading corona disease can suffer severe health problems during pregnancy and complications while giving birth. According to our research cognitions, under certain circumstances, also genetically inheritable damage and changes are to be feared, as well as impairments of neuralgic factors and of the consciousness, brain, organs in general and their function as well as of the coordinative abilities, that is to say, the general ability to organise various individual tasks and activities in a complex field of activity and to manage them in such a form that they sensefully and purposefully fit together, can be evaluated and applied in a coordinated form. However, it will still take a long time, indeed not only months and years, but under some circumstances it will take many decades or it will even be in the next centuries that the medical sciences of the terrestrial humanity will recognise, comprehend and understand all these facts.

In total, the number of those befallen by the rampantly spreading corona disease and corona fatalities will exceed all previous figures within the next few weeks. And still – namely regardless of contrary claims of unreliable ‘experts’, who in their ignorance and unknowledge want to make themselves big with the untruth and with unrealistic explanations – the beginning wave, that is to say the 1st wave, of the rampantly spreading corona disease, is still prevalent, which only now worldwide, in its full strength, wells up, down and up again, spreads and subsides again, which, however, will last for a long time. But that means that even after the peak has been reached, the danger of the rampantly spreading corona disease will not be averted, because even after the rampantly spreading disease has subsided it will remain active and, in the course of time, will claim many more infections and deaths, as I have fathomed by looking into the future. Consequently, all necessary precautionary preventive and protective measures should continue to be heeded, namely contrary to all other reckless, wrong declarations and measures by the governments and authorities, as well as contrary to the dangerous lies and trivialisations of the rampantly spreading disease by know-it-alls of low intelligence, as well as negating intellectless and irrational ones, who are just as unable to grasp the danger as the conspiracy theorists without intelligentum (Explained in more detail further down.) and their believers, and so forth.

Therefore the rampantly spreading corona disease will continue and, for the time being, strongly increase and will claim very many human lives and already soon more than one million, namely as a result of the unintellect, irrationality and incapacity of the responsible ones of the states, who are of low intelligence and incapable as well as imperious, but also due to that part of the population that is of equally low intelligence and will not integrate into the security precautions, as was already criticised in 1918 regarding the ‘Spanish flu’ by the herbal priest who you still met in 1944, together with my father Sfath.

Note: Source Wikipedia: Johann Künzle (b. September 3, 1857 in Hinterespen near St. Gallen; d. January 9, 1945 in Zizers) was a Swiss Catholic priest and publicist. Apart from Sebastian Kneipp, he is probably the best-known herbal priest and a patron of alternative medicine as well as herbal medicine.

Johann Künzle's parents owned a farm, his father also worked as a professional gardener. After his schooling in St. Gallen and the Einsiedeln monastery, Künzle studied theology and philosophy at the University of Leuven (Belgium) from 1877 and was ordained a priest at the St. Georgen seminary (St. Gallen) in 1881. Afterwards he was active as a priest in various parishes in Eastern Switzerland from 1896 to 1907 in Buchs in the Rhine Valley, until 1909 in Herisau and then until 1920 in Wangs near Sargans. During the time of the Kulturkampf of 1884, Künzle was active against the abolition of Catholic schools and institutions in Switzerland and in Vorarlberg. In 1913 he promoted spa tourism in Wangs (near Bad Ragaz) and founded a herb market. Since it was attributed to his efforts that in 1918, when the Spanish flu raged worldwide, not a single person in his community died, he was awarded the honorary citizenship.

Due to his sometimes-dubious medical views, for example, regarding the cure for diabetes, he was forcibly transferred by his bishop to Zizers in Graubünden in 1920. In 1922 he passed an examination before a council of physicians in order to be allowed to pursue a 'poison-free medicinal herb practice'. He also started a herb trade and gave lectures on the application of herbal medicine. The Kräuterpfarrer Künzle corporation was founded in 1939. In 1954 it moved to Minusio (near Locarno) and was converted into a foundation in 1980.

Künzle was the editor of popular folk calendars, the monthly magazine 'Salvia' (for 'poison-free herbal medicine'), wrote the 'Great Herb Healing Book' (1944, later revised and re-edited by Rudolf Fritz Weiss, among others) and many other publications. The book 'Herbs and Weeds' was translated into several languages after its first publication in 1911 and an updated version is still being published today.

In Zizers he worked successfully as an entrepreneur and publicist until the end of his life – but always in the service of the Catholic Church.

In Wangs you can walk along the 'Pfarrer Künzle Way', which was built and inscribed by the Pfarrer-Künzle-association. There is also a grotto on the way, which Künzle built with students and other residents of the community.

As for the rampantly spreading corona disease and the behaviour of the government officials and sections of the population in this regard, an unparalleled irresponsibility of government officials and a large part of the population has been prevailing since the beginning of the rampantly spreading disease. As a result of their incapacity – which I must always point out and emphasise again – from the very beginning of the rampantly spreading disease the mighty ones of the states have not taken the necessary measures which would have had to lead to the containment and prevention of the pandemic. This happened not only because they are in every respect incapable of leadership and have no ability whatsoever to do so, but first and foremost because their lack of intelligentum means that they are unable to assess and understand a situation consequentially, that is to say, logically. But this lack of intelligentum also prevents them from working out the capability of being able to look into the future and making the right decisions as well as acting rationally; consequently, in a crisis situation, as is currently the case with the rampantly spreading corona disease, they are completely incapable of working out correct modes of behaviour, prescribing them and enforcing them with the whole population and having them be carried out by the whole population.

Thus, so far, neither mandatory total blocking of activity nor other correct and functioning safety measures have been decreed for a necessary period of time, wherethrough the rampantly spreading disease could have been nipped in the bud within two to three months. Therefore, also in the coming weeks and months disastrous times will come for the entire populations of many countries, because they will be badly affected by the rampantly spreading disease again or anew. However, it is clearly recognisable that the necessary intelligentum was lacking with the majority of the responsible ones of the states and the majority of the populations. And this has remained the same since the beginning of the rampantly spreading corona disease up to the present day, and, due the far-reaching prevailing unintellect and irrationality of the majority of those responsible for the state and the majority of the populations acting likewise, it will remain so. However, in the time now coming that will bring much suffering and terribleness over terrestrial humanity and claim many fatalities. Therefore, the course of the rampantly spreading corona disease will drag out for some time and the first wave will only weaken after a longer period of time, because, surging up and down in an undulating form, it is only now running towards its climax, which, however, will only be reached after a longer succession of weeks and will claim deaths in excess of the first million. And this time the whole of Europe will be severely affected by it, because now the low intelligentum of the responsible ones of the states, who recklessly opened the lockdown instead of carrying out the necessarily far-reaching blocking – which would have led not only to the containment but also to the complete end of the rampantly spreading disease – will have dire consequences. Other false assertions that will come up again and again, that the expected 2nd wave is already raging, correspond to a low intelligentum unlike any other, which leads to false hopes and to the safety precautions against the rampantly spreading disease being even more generally neglected, wherethrough, as a result of this false assertion, the still running 1st wave can spread rapidly further and will further claim many thousands of fatalities in the coming months. The whole irrationality of the majority of the leaders of states and the populations, however, will nevertheless not lead to everyone becoming discerning, because on both sides all are equally fully irresponsible. The health of the human beings will therefore continue to be threatened by the rampantly spreading disease, whereby under certain circumstances in this regard the whole thing can drag on for the next 18 to 24 months and will continue to claim many deaths. Thereby already the danger exists that, due to disregarding all the necessary measures to end the worldwide raging, rampantly spreading disease, a global permanent pandemic can develop out of the whole and continue for years.

Billy Great prospects. In Persia more than 250 medical specialists have already died as a result of the coronavirus, while the number of the 'citizens of the Reich' in Germany has increased enormously without the security services knowing how many there really are. But regarding the rampantly spreading corona disease it is probably senseless to talk about it any further, because intellect and rationality are in short supply for the majority of the governors and at least for 25-30 percent of the populations. The victims in this case are all those human beings who earnestly strive for the protective measures and behave correctly and responsibly, because their intelligentum is in good shape and they are therefore intelligent, whereas the intelligentum is missing from all those who stubbornly resist ordinances or deliberately undermine them and for believers of the conspiracy theorists, and consequently they are not able to think for themselves and as a result have fallen prey to low intelligentum. Low intelligentum is just that when a human being does not think and therefore does not think about a thing and so forth due to laziness of thought, belief or defiance and so forth, or if, for lack of intelligentum, he/she is not able to do so. And if a human being lacks the intelligentum – precisely that which has been called 'intelligence' as a result of wrong designation, unknowledge and traditional misnaming and is still used in this wrong form today

– then it is hopeless, because, as a consequence, intellect and rationality cannot be used. This must probably be explained anew again and again. It is indeed necessary to explain this often and anew again and again, because the completely wrong terms, which have been used wrongly for centuries, express absolutely wrong factors, which have values other than those which would be right. This is shown in the case of the wrong term ‘intelligence’, which effectively arose with the Latins, through a banal misunderstanding, from an old Greek term, which in its ur-origin meant as much as ‘intellect-memory’. I already learnt that from your father Sfath who brought me to an ancient people in the far Orient, which in the course of time, however, dispersed and scattered in the Orient. In any case, however, I learnt that this people knew a term in their language that expressed the cognitive faculty of the human being and thus the recognition and getting to know as well as the experience and thus also intellect, rationality, knowledge and information processing, while with another people and another language and other things the same resulted, which ultimately also transferred right up to current times. Although I still know and remember the connections, I do not remember the names of the people, their language and their terms, except that out of one of the terms of this people, which was transferred into ancient Greece, a new term arose, which described the intellect, from which then also, as well as out of another term of another ancient language, the valuable German term ‘intellectum’ (Bernadette as per Billy: The “intellectum” is the entire block of the “intelligentum”, therefore it includes the intellect, rationality and knowledge and effectively sits above the intelligentum, while intelligence is the storage of knowledge.) arose. And this high-value word term ‘intellectum’ basically means the human intellectum.

Ptaah That is right, but with regard to you forgetting the names and so forth, the old oriental-eastern and later dispersed and scattered people was one that...

Billy Yes, that was it, but reviewing it again is certainly not purposive. Unfortunately, I really forgot the names, which happens again and again, because I am getting older now and ... well, yes, that is natural, but that reminds me of a question I still want to ask. But regarding cognition, I would still like to say that it is an inconsistently used term, because not only the intellect and rationality as well as the knowledge and information processing of human beings are addressed with it, but also other things and systems which neither directly nor indirectly have anything to do with the intelligentum. However, it is fundamentally regrettable that from the correct term ‘intelligentum’ ultimately the wrong term ‘intelligence’ could penetrate and solidify in such a form that these days practically no longer anybody knows that ‘intelligence’ is only the intellect-memory, but does not describe the cognition and also not the intelligentum, nor the information processing of the human being. That is why the so-called IQ is erroneously and foolishly ‘measured’ with the intellectual memory, namely with the term ‘intelligence’ – which we have already spoken about before. This is because ‘intelligence’ in reality has nothing to do with the ‘intelligentum’ and thus has nothing to do with intellect, rationality, knowledge and absolutely nothing to do with the extent of knowing the general performance capacity related to the intellectum.

The intelligence quotient (IQ) is therefore not a parameter, determined by an ‘intelligence test’, to evaluate intellectual capacity in general, that is to say, it is not an intellectum existing in general or within a specific area, such as factors of the intelligentum compared to the intelligence factor, intellect-memory. On the contrary, it is correct that the effective intelligentum quotient (IQ) corresponds to a parameter determined by an intelligentum test, which serves to determine the overall cognition, that is to say, intellect, rationality, knowledge and intellectual performance capability.

The respective intelligentum-test always refers only to the particular fact, that is to say, corresponding facts that is or which are addressed and tested, thus no general, overall intelligentum-evaluation can be put together and scored by means of points. That means that if an intellectual intelligentum-IQ-performance capability is assessed, then it can only be tested, using a quotient, on the specific tested fact – that is to say, the facts – but this does not give any testimony with regard to a performance capability based on the intellectum. Therefore, an intelligentum quotient (IQ), a parameter determined by an intelligentum-test, in any case always corresponds only to a specific fact or a limited number of facts, but never to a comprehensive general intellectual core parameter. This clearly and unambiguously states that if an intelligentum-test yields a high score, such as 130 or 140, this score is then only related to one single fact or to a few specific facts and in this respect indicates a certain intelligentum. If additionally, however, every other intelligentum-value is deficient or inferior and therefore insufficient, then a human being is of low intelligentum regardless of his/her high IQ with regard to one or more factors, that is to say, fields of expertise.

If there is talk of low intelligentum, then this is the result of the human being not considering one fact or several facts or even many facts, which means that low intelligentum is a state of not thinking, of not considering and of not fathoming the truth. Therefore, the less the human being thinks and therethrough remains unknowing in these and those things and matters, because he/she does not bethink and not fathom them, the lower his/her intelligentum is, namely also if he/she reaches high IQ-values in one field of knowledge or several of them. Consequently, if the human being concerned is incapable of general thought processes and thought values with regard to adequate general knowledge and with regard to a healthy lifestyle and coping with life, then he/she is of low intelligentum, of bean-straw-like low intelligentum or even totally of bean-straw-like low intelligentum, regardless of having a high IQ. And in that case it makes absolutely no difference whether he/she is a simple and only averagely educated human being or whether he/she holds a doctorate or a professor title.

Ptaah We really do not need to talk about this any further, because we have already clarified this in earlier conversations.

Billy Right. But now I would like to bury this subject and talk about what Darwin announced, namely that all life originated only from one single cell or microorganism and developed into all that exists. However, Sfath taught me – namely also by letting me see and learn the whole of the truth by means of his research technique, on a world developing its first basic life – that not only one single organism of a genus or species is the origin of the enormous diversity of all life on a planet. Also on Earth, the million-fold life did not develop from one single tiny cell, but, as Sfath taught me and also proved to me, first the most diverse virion particles, as they are actually called while they are still outside a cell, came into existence in masses. Only then, as Sfath taught, when a virion particle can infect a host cell, should it be called ‘vire’ or ‘virus’. Thus said, while for the time being, I would like to mention that which you have also explained before in relation to the ‘virion’. The individual virion is nothing other than a single small and highly infectious particle which, as such, is called virus, is lifeless and therefore does not correspond to any life form; therefore it also has no metabolism. Namely, depending on the species, the virus consists of a certain nucleic acid which is surrounded by a capsid sheath, that is to say, protein sheath. A virus has no protective shell, that is to say, no cell membrane and it lacks some kind of plasma, the designation of which I do not remember.

Ptaah It is a cytoplasm that has a liquid-filled reaction space for metabolic processes inside a cell; thus viruses, as you mentioned, do not have a cell membrane as a selective entrance and exit for dissolved substances. In addition, viruses do not have ribosomes; consequently they cannot produce proteins, just as they cannot produce...

Billy Thank you, now I remember again. It is the ribosomes that the viruses lack and therefore they cannot generate proteins, because they also do not have any mitochondria, which produce the actual necessary energies and powers that would be needed by the ribosomes to produce proteins. Furthermore, viruses also cannot reproduce themselves, because they can only do so if they have cells from another life form at their disposal that they can infect, which, however, they immediately do as soon as they have befallen a host cell. This is then quickly converted into a mass conversion cell and forced to start an ongoing virus multiplication process in rapid succession and inexorably produce new virus particles. Then – please correct me if I should say something wrong – human beings, animals, plants, fungi and microorganisms which consist of only one single cell, can serve as hosts for viruses. However, most viruses quite specifically infect only certain cell types. But what viruses even consist of is probably not known to the average citizens of Earth, which is why perhaps something should be said about it another time and again; namely what these various disease-causing things are all about, namely those with which it is actually the case, while about the others, which cause good things, probably nothing needs to be said.

Ptaah So, once more and repeating, the following is to be explained: viruses do not consist of one or more cells because as non-life-forms they have no cells at all. Viruses are infectious organic structures and these spread outside of cells as virions, namely by infecting cells, which, however, is only possible inside host cells that are suitable for the viruses. The main purpose of viruses is to spread, namely by infecting fresh host cells. As nucleic acids viruses are surrounded by a protein sheath, which, among other things, contains the information for controlling the metabolism of a host cell as well as the genetic material and the information for the replication of the viral nucleic acid as well as for the production of a new virion.

If cells are attacked by viruses, then they can no longer perform their normal tasks due to being the production sites of constantly newly emerging viruses, in addition to the fact that many cells are destroyed when viruses are released. In addition, symptoms of disease become apparent in the organism when the cells are infected by viruses and these begin to take effect.

The viruses carry certain molecules on their sheaths that serve them to be able to bind to and infect cells.

As soon as the viruses have entered cells the sheath dissolves and the genetic material finds its way into the cytoplasm of the cells. The nucleic acid is introduced into the cell nuclei and incorporated into the DNA of the host cells. The replication, transcription and translation of the incorporated DNA is performed by the corresponding structures of the host cells. And because the nucleic acid of the viruses contains all the necessary information for the construction of new virions, the host cells automatically produce new virus particles which are released from the cell and infect further cells, wherethrough constantly a new cycle begins.

The main effect of a virion, that is to say, a virus particle, arises from its spreading and therethrough infecting fresh host cells in that form. A virion does not correspond to any life form and therefore also cannot be killed, rather, depending on the type of virus, it merely consists of certain nucleic acids which are surrounded by a protein sheath, whereby the type of virus determines its nucleic acid which can be deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) or ribonucleic acid (RNA). However, in addition to its own information, each type of nucleic acid contains also the information that serves to control the metabolism of the host cell it affects; consequently it aligns itself with the viral information and thus causes disease and disaster. In addition to this, a virus is equipped in such a form that – because it contains corresponding genetic material – it contains information for the replication of its own viral nucleic acid, thus making it capable of producing a new virion, and as a result can multiply and spread further until there is a possibility of stopping it, which, however, is only possible through an appropriate medication and a corresponding combat and defence reaction of the infected cell.

Many common infectious diseases are caused by viruses. Viruses attack the cells of life forms and use them as hosts by first duplicating themselves with the help of the cell and consequently new viruses can only be produced in this form. As a rule, viruses destroy the cells in the process, and if this happens in a body, it can lead to protracted diseases and dangerous rampantly spreading diseases and even death. It makes no difference whatsoever to the viruses, because as non-life forms they continue to exist by multiplying as a result of duplication by the host cell, namely for as long as they can infect other host cells again and again opportunely in order to ensure their own continued existence.

Certain molecules arrange themselves on the sheath of the virion, wherethrough it can bind itself to cells, after which the interaction then leads to the absorption of the virion into the cell. Once this has taken place, the sheath, that is to say, the capsid, dissolves, after which the genetic material – DNA or RNA – finds its way into the cytoplasm of the cell. Therefore, in this form, the nucleic acid penetrates the cell nucleus, wherethrough the DNA is incorporated into the host cell. Afterwards, the replication, transcription and translation of the incorporated DNA takes place by means of the corresponding structures of the host cell. And because the nucleic acid of the virus contains all the information necessary for the new production of virions, new virus particles are automatically produced by the host cells; consequently, these new virions are then released from the cell, wherethrough the cycle of unstoppable further infection of the cells ensues. As a result, the cells can no longer perform their normal tasks and are therefore largely destroyed.

For repetition and renewed more precise explanation as well as for understanding the whole, I will repeat everything again as follows, described differently: viruses, viewed and considered closely, consist of dust-like substances and are infectious particles of the tiniest size, which, in contrast to bacteria, parasites, micro-organisms and plants, animals, creatures or insects and so forth, are not life forms; therefore they also have no metabolism and are not capable of multiplication and certainly not of reproduction without the help of a foreign cell. This is because, as non-life forms, viruses perform neither any kind of copulation act nor a birth, but can only multiply through the influence of the host cell.

As non-life-forms, viruses therefore have no metabolism; they lack a cytoplasm, a liquid-filled 'reaction space', which is existentially important for life forms and is responsible for metabolic processes inside the cell. Viruses also have no cell membrane as a protective shell and selective 'entrance and exit' in order to allow dissolved substances to enter or leave. In addition, viruses do not have ribosomes, that is to say, protein production, nor do they have mitochondria, which would produce energies and powers. And because the viruses themselves cannot produce proteins, it is impossible for them to make energy useable for themselves and replicate themselves.

To be able to replicate, that is to say, multiply, viruses need cells from another life form, so-called host cells, onto which they can dock and which they can infect. As soon as a virus has infected such a cell, it is reprogrammed, stimulated to production and misused to multiply the virus, that is to say, to produce new virus particles. As soon as cells are infected by a virus, they are called host cells, indeed regardless of whether the cell attack occurs in a human being or animal, in plants, fungi or even microorganisms that consist of only one single cell. Any cell of any kind can serve as a host for viruses, but most viruses specifically infect only quite specific cell types.

Viruses were the actual ur-origin of all life, which also makes it clear that the approximately 2.8 million viruses on Earth known to us Plejaren not only have negative, dangerous and life-destroying impacts, but also positive, benign and life-creating as well as life-sustaining impacts.

Billy What I want to ask now, however, refers to that which we recently talked about, from our initial time here in the center, namely also with regard to the communication room and the machine or apparatus with regard to health care and so forth, which was planned at that time, whereby I have also forgotten the term for that. Somehow, in our kitchen in the meantime we have talked about it now and again and with that, also the term 'rejuvenation' has been mentioned. The reason for this were my journeys into the past and future, which often took a long time.

Ptaah Translated into the German language, you can call the apparatus, which was destined for the intended communication room, Hydrodynamik-Regenerationskonverter (hydrodynamic regeneration converter).

Billy Exactly, that is the apparatus I mean, with which also the aging process of the body can be regulated and thus also inhibited and even prevented, and the human being can remain agile, mobile and vital into old age, because the cells and so forth maintain their developmental biological state at the time of the treatment, that is to say, the regeneration process, and consequently no aging process takes place. Therethrough – as your father Sfath explained to me – the developmental-biological state of the entire physical body and therewith also of all organs remains constant and maintained over several years and therefore no aging process takes place. Perhaps you can explain something further about this, whereby I think that, on the one hand, some explanations regarding the ageing of the human species could be useful in order to understand that, although life can be prolonged by suitable means, ultimately dying cannot be prevented. It could also be interesting – about which we have never talked openly – that you Plejaren only live to be over 1000 years old because you use a regeneration converter, while your normal aging is limited.

The whole of our conversations came about because in past times I was travelling so often and for many years with Sfath, Asket and Semjase, as well as with Quetzal and you. In those cases, however, every now and then I had to use the regeneration converter. Therethrough I always stayed fit and even today I owe my mobility to these devices. Often our conversations went along the lines that all those earthlings, who, as wannabe-knowledgeable ones, scientifically concern themselves with the times of the past and the future and effectively fantasise about a horrendous idle speed (slack/nonsense) are wrong regarding time. This is due to the fact that, in the past, time has to be lived through in the duration of that time, wherethrough the human being ages by this already passed time, while in the present time, from which time one changes into the past, only short minutes or hours pass due to a time manipulation. Examples of this are, on the one hand, the incident in Hinwil when, in the presence of witnesses, such as Jacobus and my ex, I freshly shaved myself and left the house around midnight, only to be travelling for about a week in the past with your daughter Semjase, but then, due to a time manipulation, I came home five hours after leaving the house, at 5 a.m. – whereby a one-week beard was growing on my face. Then ...

Ptaah I know this because you went to Crete together because you were interested in the mythological story of the Minotaur and you wanted to know the truth about it.

Billy Because at that time I wanted to get to the bottom of various stories from different mythologies in general, therefore also with regard to the Minotaur, which is said to have been a monster, half man, half bull, that ate human beings. The Minotaur or Minotaurus was a figure from Greek mythology and therefore a Wesen (A Wesen is an independently existing life form with its own individuality and personality in an impulse-based, instinct-based or conscious consciousness-form with evolution-possibilities that are specifically directed towards everything, and with its own physical, psychical (relating to the psyche), conscious, part-conscious, unconscious, impulse- or instinct-based development-forms (human being, animal, creature and plants).) with a human body but a bull's head. Based on Greek mythology and the mythological history, at that time King Minos ruled on Crete, who was regarded and worshiped as the son of the god Zeus and the goddess Europa. Minos allegedly asked Poseidon, the sea god who is said to have been his uncle, for a helping miracle in order for him to become king of Crete, but at the same time also to prevent someone else from becoming king. To that end Minos is said to have promised and sworn that for the rest of his life he would sacrifice everything to the sea god that came out of the sea, indeed also the mermaids which were already wandering through mythology at that time, but which in reality were not human sea-Wesen, but seals, which were mistakenly considered human Wesen by the human beings, because in water these mammals could easily be considered human-like. Poseidon, so the saga goes, performed the 'miracle' and Minos became king.

In return for Minos becoming king he was to make a sacrifice to the sea god; namely a magnificent bull, which the sea god sent to Minos, but which Minos liked so much that he included it in his own herd of cattle, only to sacrifice an inferior animal instead. However, Poseidon is said to have become furious and spitting mad and boundlessly angry about that and to have taken sea-divine revenge, namely allegedly by getting Pasiphae, Minos' wife, to fall in love with the magnificent bull he had sent to Minos as an offering. Pasiphae, the legend explains, then, as a result of her falling in love, desired the sea-divine bull to mate with. And to be able to do this she had Daidalos, a clever architect, inventor and technician, who according to the legend was a descendant of the god Hephaistos, build a wooden mating frame.

Daidalos, alias Dädalus, as he is called in the German language – which I must explain in the meantime in particular – according to the legend, was an extremely jealous man who, when his student invented the saw, killed him by throwing him to his death from a high roof. Afterwards, according to the legend, he fled to Crete so that he would not have to stand trial in his home town of Athens. On his escape he also took his son Icarus with him. But now back to Pasiphae, the wife of King Minos, for whom Daidalos, according to the legend, built a wooden mating frame covered with a cow skin, in which the woman could hide herself such that she was mated by the bull; consequently, she lay down in the cow mating frame and was impregnated by the bull. Thus, according to the legend, she did so and through the copulation with the bull was impregnated and then, at the right time, from this union, she gave birth to a son who was half man and half bull, that is to say, the Minotaur, namely a monster in human form with a bull's head.

When King Minos was confronted with all that happened with his wife and the bull, Daidalos had to build a labyrinth without an exit; while secretly, however, he considered and built one, which the king however knew nothing about. When the labyrinth was finished, the king had the monster locked up in the labyrinth and he also forbade Daidalos to leave the island.

One day, when King Minos received the news that his son Androgeos had been killed through the fault of King Aigeus of Athens, he waged a retaliation campaign against Athens and defeated the Athenians, after which he imposed a malicious tribute on them; namely that every nine years they had to bring seven lively young men and seven young women to Crete and into the labyrinth of the Minotaur, where they were sent into the labyrinth of the Minotaur and sacrificed to him.

Finally, as the legend continues, the matter was, however, brought to an end; namely by Theseus, the son and later successor of Aigeus. Theseus took part in the 3rd tribute himself in order to thereby kill the monster, Minotaur. Ariadne, the daughter of King Minos, fell in love with him and helped him with her Ariadne's thread that he laid out in the labyrinth and thus, with the help of the thread, found the way through the labyrinth in which the Minotaur lived. There are other versions regarding this, but I do not want to talk about them, rather only about the legend stating that Theseus defeated the Minotaur, killed him and, with the help of Ariadne's laid out thread, found his way back out of the labyrinth with the young men and young women.

King Minos finally had Daidalos and his son Icarus locked in the labyrinth as punishment, because it was said that Icarus was the one who had unrolled the thread from the entrance into the labyrinth so that the avenger, Theseus, could find his way out again. Daidalos, as the builder of the labyrinth, knew the exit of course and fled after he had built wings for himself and his son Icarus to use them to escape from the island.

Together with Icarus, Daidalos climbed up onto a high rock near the sea, where both put on their prefabricated wings, and Daidalos impressed on his son not to climb too high into the sky, because otherwise the sun would melt the wax with which the feathers were attached to the wings. He also hammered it into him not to fly too low, because the spray of the sea would soak his wings and he could fall. Once the two flew off, the legend tells us, the two were quickly over the open sea and Icarus enjoyed flying recklessly and high-spiritedly to such an extent that he climbed higher and higher into the sky, thus that which his father had previously warned him about happened. When he came too close to the blazing sun, the wax melted and the wings lost their feathers, therefore Icarus fell into the sea and drowned. The island on which his washed-up body was later found, according to the legend, was then named 'Icaria' in his honour.

Daidalos mourned his son very much, but he arrived safe and sound in Sicily, where he was well received by King Kokalos, who later also protected him from King Minos, who wanted to bring him back when he escaped after the matter concerning the wooden mating frame and the thread laid out in the labyrinth. But afterwards Daidalos lived for a long time and, as a technician, made many great inventions. Today he is considered the ancestor of all sculptors because he is said to have created the first large statues, which, however, is not true because I have seen larger sculptures much earlier; namely during journeys into the past that led back to the time of the Neanderthals about 50,000 years ago. However, Daidalos is also regarded as the ancestor of the technicians, indeed also erroneously, because regarding this I also know, because I have seen it myself, that already more than 6800 years ago in the southern flat areas of the Danube and up to the hilly foothills of the Bavarian alpine regions there lived human beings who had developed technical skills and laboriously cut thick slices from massive tree trunks, which were shaped like wheels and made with a hole in the middle. A straight, thick branch was pushed through this and then the whole thing was used as a kind of mill wheel, namely for grinding grain and nuts and so forth into flour. At a later time, during a visit to the past, about 3600 years before Immanuel, I also saw with the Sumerians in Mesopotamia how they were also chiselling wheels with centred holes out of large thick stones, which they provided with thick 'axles' and used to move carts.

However, the reason that made me want to be brought back to Minoan times was to find out how, why and from what the Minotaur legend was born. And I was able to find that out too, which means the reality was that the Minotaur legend only came into being almost three centuries after the death of King Minos and was based on something that had nothing at all to do with the belief in the sea god Poseidon. The effective fact was that, as your daughter Semjase and I undoubtedly learned and found out in the places of the events of that time, Pasiphae, the wife of King Minos, was impregnated by him and then gave birth to a son who was physically disfigured, similar to the 'elephant man' who lived in England in the last century. Also a film was made of this man back then, which I have seen, and additionally he was shamefully and irresponsibly misused as an effective money-making sensational showpiece, wherethrough various scoundrels were able to enrich themselves due to his misery. About that, I think some information can certainly be found on the internet; at least a description of the person, his name and his history. Perhaps a photo can be found as well, wherefore I will have a look. If I should find a picture, I will add it to our conversation, but if possible, also a description.

Note: Wikipedia: Joseph Carey Merrick (b. August 5, 1862 in Leicester; d. April 11, 1890 in London) became known in the Victorian age as the Elephant Man. Merrick suffered from severe deformations of his body, which completely disfigured his shape and face. In the Victorian era he was considered the worst example of the pathological deformation of the human face. Since his childhood John Merrick was terribly disfigured. As an Elephant Man, he was paraded at fairs and tormented by his sadistic owner until the doctor Frederick Treves finally discovered him and offered to help him.

England in the late 19th century. The 'Elephant Man', John Merrick, suffers from severe physical deformities since childhood, especially his head and upper body are severely deformed. He is exhibited at fairs as a rare curiosity by a sadistic and exploitative showman and is gawped at by the sensation-seeking public. But then the surgeon Frederick Treves becomes aware of his case and takes him along to London in order to examine him there and give him a human-worthy home in the hospital. After initial scepticism, the staff there finally agree when it becomes clear that a sensitive and intelligent character is dormant in the 'Elephant Man'. But regardless of the fruitful efforts of the doctor to introduce John Merrick into society, even here he is not safe from human cruelty.

Life of the Elephant Man

Merrick's deformities were not recognisable at birth, but began to develop from the age of 21 months and became more severe from the age of 5. At first he attended a normal school. When his mother, Mary Jane Merrick, died of pneumonia on May 19, 1873, she left Joseph and his two younger siblings, William Arthur and Marion Eliza. His father changed his place of residence and soon afterwards married his landlady who brought her own children into the marriage and had little sympathy for Joseph. She forced her husband to expel Joseph from the family environment. With the help of his uncle Charles Merrick, Joseph initially found work at Messrs. Freeman's Cigar Manufacturers, but soon had to give it up because his right hand had become too heavy and misshapen for cigar making. After a few unprofitable attempts as a street vendor, Merrick went to fairs as a 'monster' with the participation of Tom Norman.

In November 1886 Joseph Merrick was in London where he caught the attention of the surgeon, Frederick Treves, who examined him and wrote a report about him (using the name 'John Merrick' for Merrick), which was later published in the British Medical Journal.

Since the exhibitions were repeatedly prohibited by the authorities, Merrick travelled with his manager to Belgium from where he returned of his own accord in December 1886. On arrival in London he was held up and robbed of his savings of 50 pounds (equivalent to the purchasing power of about 6000 € in 2007). The only salvation in this desperate situation was a business card from Treves from whom he sought help. Treves granted him admission to the London Hospital. Merrick's stay was later financed by the Joseph Merrick Fund, which was provided by donations from readers of the London Times.

Treves describes Merrick as an intelligent, albeit childishly naive human being, with a pleasant character. His speech, however, was so impaired by his deformity that only a few persons who had regular contact with him were able to understand him.

Merrick died unexpectedly on April 11, 1890. In the morning he was in good physical condition, in the afternoon he was found dead on his bed. It is assumed that he suffered a stroke or a mild heart attack that brought him down. Death was then caused by suffocation.

Joseph Merrick could only sleep squatting due to kyphoscoliosis (hunchback and lateral spinal curvature). On the day of his death, however, Joseph Merrick was found lying on his back in his bed, something he had normally always avoided. Due to his deformity in other respects there was a danger that his rather heavy head would sink backwards into the sleeping base and, in that case, overstretch the windpipe and close it off. And exactly this was probably the cause of his death – whether intentionally or unintentionally brought about cannot be answered.

Occasionally the assumption was expressed that Merrick was Jack the Ripper. However, this assumption is devoid of any basis and completely unfounded: Merrick suffered from severe movement restrictions due to his deformities and he could not hold an object in his right hand. With the given limitations he would have had difficulties and would have needed more time to master the rather fine motor actions performed on the killed human beings. Moreover, he would have attracted too much attention due to his movements and his appearance.

Reasons for the Deformation

Merrick suffered from a genetic disorder that not only caused enormous changes in the skin, but also distended the bones. Thus, at a height of 157 cm, the head (circumference 91 cm), arms and legs were oversized and only the left hand was not affected by the disease.

During Merrick's lifetime, doctors assumed that he suffered from elephantiasis. In 1971 Ashley Montagu assumed that it might have been the hereditary disease neurofibromatosis (Recklinghausen disease). In 1979 Michael Cohen discovered the rare Proteus Syndrome, which was identified as the cause of Merrick's deformities in 1986. In contrast to Recklinghausen's disease, Proteus syndrome does not affect nerve cells but tissue cells. A DNA analysis of Merrick's bones and hair in July 2003 confirmed that he did indeed suffer from Proteus Syndrome. However, additional evidence of Recklinghausen disease was also found.

Some experts still doubt the previous cognitions on the causes of Joseph Merrick's disease, especially with regard to the thesis that it is Proteus Syndrome. Michael Simpson, a geneticist at Guy's Hospital in London, is currently (2013) carrying out preparations for the examination of Joseph Merrick's genome and is certain that at least one major cause of the physical deformities is due to a single, non-inherited mutation. The current goal of his preparations is directed at the study of the AKT1 gene on chromosome No. 14. This gene regulates the growth in healthy human beings and is, among other things, involved in apoptosis, the programmed cell death. If this gene does not function or does not function properly, this function is no longer performed and the observed tissue excrescences occur. According to Michael Simpson, it should by now be technically possible to provide genetic proof of the Proteus Syndrome thesis.

Until now, the problem was that valuable tissue samples were lost during the Second World War and the skeleton has simply been subjected to the most varied cleaning procedures far too often and too intensively since the death of Joseph Merrick in 1890. Simpson suspects that Joseph Merrick is one of the rare individual cases of a disease. Simpson has been able to identify 20 of such individual cases in the past three years. Each one of these 20 cases were point mutations.

*****

Like Joseph Carey Merrick, the so-called 'Elephant Man', the 2nd son of King Minos and his wife Pasiphae was also severely deformed physically and showed a certain resemblance to a bull's head, and his shape and therefore also his face was completely disfigured. And as it was then, and as it is still the case today, the boy was disowned by his parents due to his congenital physical deformation. Usually at that time, handicapped children were already killed after birth, but Minotaur, as he was called, was spared. This happened because the king and his wife feared that the sea god had brought about the whole of the body deformation as a punishment, because they had spread evil insults against him. Therefore they were anxious that Poseidon would take renewed and even worse revenge on them if the son, who was physically deformed by his power, was killed. Thus Minos and Pasiphae decided that a royal household servant, Aphaia – or something like that was her name – had to take care of their son and raise him, namely far away in the vast country. Minotaur had a good intelligentum, was of a very peaceful nature and was surprisingly well educated by the royal household servant, therefore one could talk to him through a translator.

When he was grown up and his governess also made his origins known to him, he tried to enter the royal household and demand his rights, which, however, led to the king and his wife reacting maliciously and consequently instructing Daidalos to build a labyrinth, which was actually a huge cave, in order to imprison the physically deformed son in it. However, always fearing the revenge of Poseidon, they tried to appease the sea god, namely by arranging for human sacrifices to be regularly made in the labyrinth, but only young persons of both sexes, who were first chosen from the population, stolen and killed as victims, but later from Athens, after war had been waged there and the Minoans had won.

That which finally has to be mentioned in regard to the whole thing is that as a result of the sacrifice of young human beings for appeasement, that is to say, for propitiation and for fear of revenge of the god Poseidon, the lie has arisen that the imprisoned man, who was disowned by his father and mother and who was called Minotaur because of his deformed face, head and body, is a man-eater, which is why the human sacrifices offered for Poseidon would also serve him as food.

Then, on the other hand, I now come back again to what happened with regard to traveling in the past, also with regard to the thing in Andeer, when my girlfriend freaked out when I, infected with metal fume fever, was with her in the hotel, had just shaved and she went out to do some shopping, whereupon your niece, Asket, took me away to go back in time for 11 months, during which time I grew a handsome beard. Then, through a time manipulation, Asket took me back to the hotel room about half an hour after I left, after which my girlfriend got upset because she thought I was trying to annoy her by sticking a full beard on my face that she wanted to tear off. When she then noticed that the beard was real, she went crazy and of course she could no longer understand anything, because I was not allowed to explain anything to her. Her intellect was simply overwhelmed, which is why the danger of cracking up arose, which is why Asket intervened and erased the experience from her memory. But there were several other similar incidents where it was noticed that after short absences I suddenly had longer stubble on my face again, but, as a rule, I got off lightly with these observations, because the ones watching me knew what was going on.

Well, also otherwise over (regarding) time, scientists tell nonsense or fantasise about it, thus also in relation to astronomy, because the entire science of astronomy has no idea how and what the universe is at all in reality. Therefore they also do not know that everything visible from the Earth, in total everything of the stars and so forth, corresponds to only one seventh of the space-time-structure-universe, just as this space-time-structure-universe also constitutes only one seventh of the entire space of Creation, which has a lifespan – starting from the so-called Big Bang until the end of the final contraction – of 311 million-million Earth years. Also they have no idea how the real universal laws and the laws of Creation work, nor of how the dimensions and all the trap-pings with regard to the creational coming into being and behaving work and that everything is quite different from what is assumed or claimed. And that the Creation is delusionally referred to as God and God-Father – as Allah, Theós, Parameshvar, Shiva, Chodā, Shén or Kami and so forth – corresponds to nothing else but a pathologically erroneous imagination that is endlessly far from any truth.

Ptaah This is indeed the case in regard to everything you have explained. And what you have mentioned regarding the developmental-biological cell state is also right. The biological fundamental discipline in relation to the species, human being, corresponds to biogerontology, but to explain it in more detail, in relation to the science of aging, would correspond to a scientific study in relation to the human life in old age and the ageing of the human being. Thus it would be senseless to give far-reaching explanations; therefore I want to only briefly answer your question as follows: ageing corresponds to a factor that is progressive and not reversible at all and therefore is not such that a rejuvenation could occur. In human beings, as in the majority of all other life forms, the biological process is regulated according to the law of Creation in such a form that the organism is made up of multiple cells. Consequently, there is a gradual change, that is to say, an incremental or progressive change which is determined by ageing, namely in that a loss of energy and power as well as ailing of the healthy body and organ functions occurs. The gradually occurring deterioration of the energies and powers of the entire organism, as well as ailments and diseases, ultimately lead to biological death, while ageing causes major health risk factors with regard to various diseases, such as cancer, Alzheimer's disease, chronic kidney failure and Parkinson's disease as well as coronary heart disease and accidents and so forth. Therethrough a maximum life span results which cannot be ascertained and achieved in advance; consequently, ageing is significantly limited by all these factors.

Ageing, as a physiological process, corresponds to an elementary life process which is inherent to all higher life forms and represents a biological phenomenon which can well be positively influenced and prolonged by various measures, however, in its effectiveness it cannot be reversed, that is to say, terminated.

In general, ageing is therefore a process of a series of different highly complex organic processes that influence the entire organism and determine the lifespan of all biological systems, such as cells; therefore they also put a time limit on the organs, tissues and organisms built from them. This process of ageing can be influenced and extended by suitable means, whereby, however, there are also maximum limits in regard to this; consequently organ regeneration cannot take place endlessly, because when a certain state is reached through natural ageing of the organs, they become susceptible to ageing and fail inexorably. And this brings me to the explanation regarding our age limit, which according to earthly time is normally not 1000, 1200 or 1400 years or more, because our Plejaren life span on average is 380 years, calculated according to terrestrial years, which differ only a little bit to our time.

Furthermore, with regard to the age and ageing of our Plejaren humanity, it must be said that many persons do not strive to prolong their lives and therefore do not use any of the hydrodynamic regeneration converters available to everyone, but live through their lifetime normally and die just as normally when they have become tired of life. Suicides are absolutely unknown to us, just as diseases are. Only on Earth could health problems occur for us until the 1980s with regard to rhinitis, which, however, is no longer the case since 1983. Other persons of our humankind use the regeneration apparatuses to live on for some years, decades or centuries; namely especially when very long commitments which last many centuries are entered into and carried out. However, in those cases it rarely happens that one strives to live beyond 1500 years, because inevitably, over time, life fatigue or the natural aging process occurs, consequently then, also in natural form, death becomes the end of life.

Billy Thank you, that was certainly necessary to explain. But look here at this newspaper note; Alexei Anatol'yevich Nawalny, who we spoke about the other day, was obviously really poisoned. He is a Russian lawyer and an oppositional dissident and politician who pretendingly calls himself democratic. Since about 2009 he has been making a name for himself, but in my opinion not in a democratic form, but as a radical who is out for Gewalt.

Ptaah I know this and what you say is true, because this man is devious, malicious and oriented towards Gewalt and pathologically towards might, as I have ascertained. If he were to attain might, he could only be expected to wield might, as is inherent to all those obsessed by might in state leaderships, organisations, families, the military, the workplace and anywhere else where they can live out their lust for might with the help of their simple-minded, intelligentum-impaired advocates. And this man ...

Billy You astonish me, my friend, for you have recently been tending more and more towards idioms that actually belong in my inventive vocabulary.

Ptaah As you always say: it just rubs off. Besides, I just realise that our conversation today with regard to the terrestrial human inadequacies is taking forms and is leading to statements for which I too have to use your vocabulary for once to clarify some things that can neither be said nor properly expressed with gentle and diplomatic phrases and words.

Billy Exactly. But, getting back to Nawalny: what I still want to say about this man in order to catch up is that I have already seen enough of his picture in newspapers and on TV shows and have got a very bad impression and even the impression that this man is completely unscrupulous-malicious and capable of everything that the devil and Beelzebub have to offer. His physiognomy expresses something very malicious and devious, which gives rise to the thought that, in order to make Putin guilty and to finish him off, he may have arranged everything himself and may have miscalculated something. But effectively this is only a conjectured possibility, as well as the possibility that he could have been driven to and paid for his private war against Putin by one of the US secret services, while, on the other hand, there is also the possibility that he was actually sandwiched with 'some' Novichok from any side of the Russian people, such as Putin enemies, separatists or other crooked figures. That Putin is supposed to be behind this, however, I dare to doubt for various reasons, as well as because his intelligentum is to be rated much higher than that of Nawalny, who seems to me like a snot boy going crazy, who is obviously driven by low intelligentum, hatred, publicity horniness and might behaviour.

Most of the governors live out their lust for might and are misgoverning, while good people are demonised by opposition members with lust for Gewalt, such as this Nawalny who attacks Putin and wants to force him out of office. Such earthlings want to take the rudder into their own hands, to then create unorder in the country and demolish everything good, which is obviously also the plan of Nawalny, who wants to change and demolish everything that Putin has built up in Russia and the order he has also created in the country. About that I also think that the whole world actually has to be glad and grateful that Putin is at the top in Russia, because he knows how to parry the poisonous attacks of the EU dictatorship and the USA and all the other blind fools. This in particular regarding the state powers of the USA, the EU dictatorship, Germany and other countries, which are totally of bean-straw-like low intelligentum, to which unfortunately also certain elements of Switzerland belong, which additionally are willing to betray the homeland and to sell it off to the EU dictatorship. All of them are sick in the head and have no idea that they are lucky that Putin is the top intelligent leader in Russia, stoically parries all attacks and therethrough prevents another great or even world war, which the might-leadership-idiots of the USA have already been striving for again for a long time. And this is what the USA are fabricating, just as they have been doing since time immemorial and are feloniously accustomed to – to interfere in the affairs of other countries worldwide, to create unpeace, to send their military killers into all countries and to bring more and more countries under their bloody control. But the ones with the lowest intelligentum among all those of low intelligentum do not recognise and understand this, because their intelligentum is not sufficient for that. And unfortunately we also have such elements in Switzerland, who hang on the malodorous backsides of the fallible and pathological might-hungry ones in the US-government, but in the same form also in Switzerland do and try everything to drive our country into the dirty EU-dictatorship and to integrate it into it, whereby such totally dense-dumb and homeland-traitorous, dirty elements can be found not only in the population and in EU-dictatorship-friendly parties, but also in the National Council, Council of States and Federal Council. This, while those who are righteous, loyal to Switzerland and to our good, peaceful and neutral homeland are held down in their state offices by the lies, calumnies and misrepresentations of the homeland traitors of both sexes in such a form that resistance is impossible for them. This is especially true because the lying toads in their official positions of might, with their truth-calumniating misrepresentations and false information, also deceive the voters and bring them to casting their votes according to the lies and misrepresentations in favour of the EU dictatorship supporters and so forth.

Unfortunately, it is also the same in Switzerland, and about that I want to mention it explicitly, because I know that many will berate my openness with curses and reproach, because, on the one hand, they are too cowardly to think the effective facts through for themselves precisely and logically, thus they are neither able to find, recognise nor understand the reality and truth. On the other hand, precisely because of their cowardly non-thinking they are struck by low intelligentum and therethrough have fallen prey believingly to all those who create deceiving and political lying-views and calumnies, which they maliciously direct against other persons and nations in which they interfere, although all their matters are of no concern to them at all. All these are the ones who again and again interfere in the dealings of foreign countries, in their politics and, and, and,... and form irrational opinions about other human beings, peoples and nations, although they neither have a sound knowledge of human nature, nor know the facts of the circumstances of the nations and populations, the corresponding mentality and everything else necessary for an effective correct assessment of the facts and situation and so forth. Immediately they trumpet condemnations and cause enmity and terror while the fallible ones, however, who usually are perched in the highest places of governments and religious leaderships as well as in media editorial offices, are the ones who cause terror and evil, incite the populations with insane insults against other human beings and countries and call forth hatred. And it is then the unthinking majority of the population – that likewise does not search for the truth – which starts howling and rants and roars with hatred and contempt for humanity against those and finally goes out with weapons and even warlike against the others who are cursed by the badgering ones. But because the effectively fallible ones – those perched at the highest levels in the governments and in the religions, organisations, sects, associations, in families and family clans, in simple groups and/or authorities and so forth – have neither good and healthy psychological skills and cognisance because they have learned nothing in this regard, they lack any knowledge of human nature, as well as any effective ability to assess human beings, their modes of behaviour and in every respect they also lack the flair to assess and determine something correctly and accurately. But this is exactly the point that should be demanded of human beings quite especially and should be obligatory for any positions of leadership; namely in governments as well as in religions, circles, schools, organisations, sects, associations, in families and family clans, in simple groups and/or in authorities and so forth. Such kinds of responsible positions should only be occupied by persons who would have to be effectively trained in the above mentioned regard, namely also concerning the ability to quickly and efficiently-rightly logically assess, that is to say, consistently and correctly assess an arising thing, a happening, a necessity or a situation and so forth and to act accordingly.

However, it is precisely these necessary abilities that the majority of all governors, as well as leaders, superiors, representatives of religions, authorities, organisations, sects, associations, families and family clans and groupings of all kinds, and so forth, usually lack, which leads to unrest, uprisings, war and terror as well as to dissatisfaction, hatred and all conceivably possible terrible things in all countries of the world. And the lack of all these abilities, which most urgently need to be learned, has above all an effect on all the highest rulers of all the nations of the world, with all the highest rulers of the USA being at the forefront, and in Europe it is those of the EU dictatorship and those of the Federal Republic of Germany, to which unfortunately it must be added that the majority of the populations of these states are likewise uneducated, simple-minded, non-thinking and consequently of low intelligentum with regard to the same skills, which is why they choose the greatest dopes as their leaders. It is common knowledge that non-thinking and thus low intelligentum knows no boundaries, is endless and does not promote any abilities in any good, right and progressive positive form.

It is the same everywhere in the world that if someone tells the truth, especially a god-delusion non-believer and a non-party member like me, he/she is then all around decried as a troublemaker, antisocial one and felon and so forth – especially by secret services and state protectors, as these ‘heroic ones’ call themselves, who demonstrably denigrated me with lies and calumnies even in their fiches. In those cases, they blacked out the names of informers, but wrote the fiches that damn stupid and with low intelligentum that even the last fool in world history could read between the lines who the informers were. And this is truly the best example of how great the intelligentum of certain stupid ‘secret service agents’ and other people is, who are ‘remunerated’ by the Swiss citizens with the taxpayers’ money and who, on the one hand, are simple-minded and, on the other hand, audaciously spy on their own countrymen and at the same time are of too low intelligentum to get to the bottom of the effective truth. And all of this effectively corresponds to a certificate of intelligentum-poverty, when such ‘espionage experts’, who are supposed to work for the security of the country, let themselves be lulled in by lies and calumnies of malicious informers instead and, moreover, take every rubbish and nonsense told to them at face value and believe it without verification. They do this, just as they, as believers, also usually believe the nonsense that a certain imaginary ‘Lord God’ created the universe and everything up to the last flea and virus and is responsible for everything functioning according to his given rightness and love. However, thereby it must be asked where in these creatures their religious and supposedly god-related righteousness and love in which they believe is to be found, as is also the case with the majority of humanity. Namely when I look at these figures, then they are no different from the super-majority of the overpopulation; all around me I see only feigned, lying god-belief, alleged observance of alleged commandments of god and love of the next one, although all these effectively only feigned observances of the laws of god correspond to nothing else but lying to oneself and self-deception. And this is exactly what has been proven again and again since time immemorial, because the super-majority of the entire god-believing terrestrial humanity instinctively reacts in a flash in every conceivable malicious, hostile form and with Gewalt as soon as something arises that gets on its nerves or even just goes against its own view or opinion. If such a thing arises, then the entire god-delusion belief is forgotten in a flash; consequently the love commanded by god, the love for the next one and righteousness, everything peaceful, the freedom of opinion, everything good, friendly, free/liberal, all decency, protection of all life, as well as all honour and dignity, are nothing but smoke and mirrors. In a flash the only reaction is rage, either with malicious insults or with lies and calumnies. Then, however, when it goes on and anger arises, everything immediately gets badly out of the control of the good human nature and results in massive fisticuffs, with irrational acts of Gewalt, right up to murder and manslaughter, war and terror. And this arises abruptly as soon as something is said or done that is contrary to what is in accordance with one's own opinion and one's own view and which is, above all, directed against one's own god-delusion belief. And it is precisely this belief in the Lord God, who supposedly reigns in love and encourages his flocks to love, that is then simply disregarded, trampled underfoot and used to harass the next one, hurl bad words and insults at him/her, even consciencelessly carry out acts of Gewalt against him/her, namely freely according to the principle of the god-delusion-belief, to wage war in the name of the Lord and with his blessing, which, however, corresponds to nothing other than, 'if you do not want to be my brother or sister, then I will smash your skull'.

The fact is that, with the god-delusion believers, everything hidden and everything malicious and ausgeartet (past participle of 'ausarten', which means that something has got badly out of the control of the good human nature.), and that which is buried in their lowest character base and vegetates there, immediately breaks out when they think they are being attacked. Everything comes immediately and uncontrollably to the outbreak and rampage; all evil, falsehood and Gewalt, all unpeace, war, terror, lies and deceit, as well as murder and manslaughter, hatred, revenge and retaliation, as well as avariciousness, greed, physical and psychical Gewalt, paedophile disgracefulness and everything else that the god-delusion belief suppresses, but only until an attack or an opportunity for an outbreak occurs. Then, in a flash, all god-fearing things disappear and allow all that which is malicious to break through; consequently then all supposedly 'good' god-fearing thoughts and resolutions for peacefulness, love, righteousness and love for the next one and so forth, vanish in a flash and are forgotten as if they had never been thought. And since this is the case, as I myself have experienced and lived through with countless human beings in many countries including Switzerland, since I have been disparaged by the lies and calumnious fiches of the 'Swiss State Protectors', I can only say that this is a disgrace for Switzerland. The fact that such espionage top brass drips are unleashed on decent, hard-working Swiss citizens who keep their home country in honour and dignity and are discriminated against by means of lies and calumnies, has even cost human lives, namely when Swiss were executed during the last world war, as I myself witnessed at the Katzensee, when my godfather – who was a guard in the prison 'Pöschwies' in Regensdorf – crept with me as a boy through the forest to the place of the happening, where we witnessed the execution. And all this spying on, suspecting and discriminating by espionage elements has been going on since that time when this nasty and yet ridiculous troop was brought into being at the taxpayers' expense.

Ptaah I can understand your provocative explanation, because I have seen your fiches that you have presented to me. I also know what unpleasant lived experiences and practical experiences you have made in this form all around in many countries and talked about. And the mentioned fiches, which were put together as a result of lies and calumnies against your person, were more than just an unparalleled disgracefulness. In the same form that such behaviour towards one's own compatriots is manifested and that elements paid for by the state infiltrate private affairs, the same thing is done in practically all countries of the world by the leaders of all countries interfering in the affairs of other countries, disciplining them and stupidly-brazenly punishing them with sanctions. On the one hand, however, with that, it is not the enemy governors who are hit, but the populations who are innocent and uninvolved in the machinations of their leadership, who have to suffer under the sanctions of foreign states as well as under the wrong actions and nonsensical deeds of their own governments.

It must also be mentioned once that in all countries of the world everything is completely thoughtlessly and with low intelligentum over-organised with regard to all laws, rules, decrees and manifold regulations and so forth, wherethrough the populations are kept like a kind of state slaves and are not free. In all terrestrial countries an over-organisation with regard to domination and control over all strata of the population and their existential forms, freedoms, duties, decrees, prohibitions, rights and rules prevails, wherethrough the terrestrial human beings have no real freedom but are enslaved, even if they are led to believe that they have freedom and blindly believe this lie. This fact as well as the religiously cultivated and maintained god-delusion has since time immemorial also fostered unpeace, Gewalt, hatred of foreigners, racial hatred and ethnic hatred in the majority of terrestrial humanity. And all these malicious things are also prevalent in the majority of all governors, security forces and protecting might, therefore they stir up attacks, lies, calumnies, enmity and unpeace among and against other countries at every possible opportunity, burden them with sanctions and, if possible, ignite wars, wherethrough endless suffering, misery and mass deaths come about. In this regard, on the one hand, the majority of those good-for-nothing governors must be mentioned in the first place, who, because of their incapacity, never should be able to hold or lead such an office, but who, because of the low intelligentum of the majority of the populations, are nevertheless elected for it and, moreover, are enthusiastically admired and exalted. This despite the fact that they are unfit as leaders and are more harmful and disastrous than that they, in their incapacity and in their inconsequential thinking and acting, bring about something good, right, peaceful, progressive and rational. But precisely those who are absolutely incapable of their office are – for lack of knowledge of human nature, lack of thought and consideration and due to incapacity and thus as a result of the effective low intelligentum of the majority of the population – elected to the state leadership, are exalted and frenetically acclaimed, wherethrough the acclaimed ones, all the more uninhibitedly, can carry out their baleful political-destructive work, create unpeace in the world and lead their peoples into need and misery.

Billy About that I think we have now surely said enough, which is why it is probably more important to speak about other things, such as the question of what has come from your linguists and scribes, of whom you recently said that they had complained about my forms of writing and that I should take care in the future to avoid certain mistakes because it would be tedious for them to correct them and to set right everything that I have written wrong in a sentence, because it did not correspond to that which came out of the conversation notes. About that I would like to know what I am doing wrong so that I can write it out in the right form.

Ptaah On the one hand, they object to you inserting hyphens between different words and terms, which are absurd, as they explain. So it is not only completely wrong but, moreover, an improper thing that you subdivide words, designations and terms with hyphens, which do not need such, because the individual values, words, and terms are independently their own and should not be joined together with hyphens into false unit values. On the other hand, they further complain ...

Billy Just a moment, please, because I do not understand what is meant by that. Can you give me two or three examples, please, because I should know to what extent I make hyphenation mistakes in the mentioned respect, because if I do not know these mistakes I am standing there like a donkey on a mountain and cannot correct the wrong thing.

Ptaah Of course, you can only avoid these wrongly written words if you know what is wrong. See, therefore, these notes that were brought to my attention concern, among other things, these misrepresentations: FIGU-Zeitzeichen, FIGU-Periodicals, Semjase-Silver-Star-Center, FIGU-members, FIGU-forum and Readers' Questions-Answer.

The explanations regarding the objections are illustrated by the fact that in every case there are wrong connections, because there is no direct connection between the single term values, but that every term represents an independent value in itself, therefore no joining by a hyphen should be allowed. In this form, for example, the term 'FIGU' is an independent value, which is to be interpreted as 'Free Community of Interests Universal', while the term 'forum' corresponds to another independent value, which is not directly connected to FIGU, but embodies a completely independent value, which means asynchronous communication; consequently, individual contributions do not happen at the same time but are temporally shifted. A FORUM serves the exchange of thoughts or a matter as well as the spreading and archiving of cognitions, experiences, personal or community views and ideas as well as opinions and knowledge and so forth, therefore the different values are not to be connected with hyphens, but are to be kept separate.

Billy Aha, I see, but that has been clear to me since my early youth, because your father Sfath already taught me that. But the whole thing that arises concerning the dashes, that is to say, hyphens as you say, is not my work, because I did not introduce it here.

Ptaah Our scholars also complain – they master your Swiss-German dialect and language, as well as the High German language very well – that the word order in the transcripts of conversations which we take from your computer is often changed from the original text and is misrepresented right up to the final result, with word displacements obviously occurring in the sentence orders, wherethrough sentence falsifications occur. These then no longer correspond to your original, but to a false and extrinsic mode of speaking; consequently, also an extrinsic sense of fact results, which, influenced by a extrinsic factor, no longer corresponds to the meaning of your statements and explanations.

Each person has a particular style of speaking through which he/she selects, determines and pronounces his/her word positions and therethrough explains facts clearly in a particularly form, which, however, are falsified by word displacements.

We know that unpleasant external harmful interferences take place again and again in your computer. Therefore the reason for these occurrences of word displacements in a sentence – which no longer correspond to the true course of the conversation but a falsification of the conversation – is probably the harmful interferences in your computer. For years Yanarara and Zafenatpaneach have made an effort already to also find the origin of these interferences in your computer, but unfortunately also in this respect they have not yet been successful.

It is the task of our scholars of writing and language to check the recordings of our conversations conducted in your mother tongue to see whether you have written them correctly in the High German language, from which they translate word for word into our Plejaren language. And this is done according to the peculiarities of your regionally and socially defined Swiss-German and the conversion of the same into the High German language. However, as our scholars have repeatedly ascertained and objected to, the conversation reports, in their sentence order, often no longer correspond to the peculiar forming of the words as well as the word combination or the syntactic structure and also no longer to the overall meaning, which is supposed to be deduced from the individual meanings of the words in the course of the sentence.

The final text that we retrieve from your computer no longer corresponds to the first text that we also retrieve in order to check the content of the whole thing and to prevent any incorrect records. However, we have never found anything in this form, but it happens again and again that your computer record no longer corresponds to the final record because sometimes there is a repeated occurrence of such falsifications in which words are moved to other places in the sentences, resulting in completely different sentence values. The use of sentence values occurs according to the individual use of meaning, which, however, is falsified by word displacements, and because this is the case with the final copy of the conversation reports, our scholars are laboriously busy restoring the original version in the correct form. Unfortunately, despite many efforts, Zafenatpaneach and Yarnarara have not yet been able to show any results with their efforts to understand the technology used to cause the damage in the written work in your computer.

Billy Unfortunately there are things between heaven and Earth ..., but that would lead too far which is why I had better ask again about Jack the Ripper, because even today this murderer still bothers certain people; therefore these people are still today, after more than 140 years, under the delusion that they have to find the 'true' killer, who, however, was caught and executed.

Since the happenings of that time, it must have been 1888 or so if I remember correctly, 'shop talkers' and other know-it-alls and 'researcher greats' and so forth, have linked about 80 suspects to the crimes of Jack the Ripper, who murdered and mutilated five prostitutes in London. Now clever British researchers from Liverpool and Leeds newly believe again that they finally know the true identity of the London serial killer and that they would actually know his identity, namely thanks to a DNA trace they claim to have found.

A certain Dr. Jari Louhelainen as well as a David Miller, who are supposed to be scientists, are supposed to have examined a scarf that is said to have belonged to one of the victims, who is said to have been murdered by Jack the Ripper in 1888. At least that is how it is written in the research magazine 'Journal of Forensic Sciences'. The two researchers claim this because they attribute the DNA trace to an immigrant from Poland, namely a hairdresser, named Aaron Kosminski, who lived in London at the time. Approximately 130 years ago he was already treated as one of the main suspects by Scotland Yard. Even hobby detectives have had this suspicion for a long time, but until today effectively nobody has ever been able to prove halfway or completely that he or any of the other again and again new suspects was actually the Ripper; consequently, all the crimes they were accused of could never be proven and also no real culprit could ever be found.

In the world history since 1888, there have repeatedly been new investigations, that is to say, fantasy and illusory investigations, and thus many theories about who really committed the murders and who Jack the Ripper really was. For example, in the 1940s the last one of the suspects died while now, on the other hand, the newest suspect had to be Aaron Kosminski, who was said to have been Jack the Ripper and to have been crazy in his consciousness, which is why he was admitted to a psychiatric hospital in 1890 and died there 29 years later, in 1919.

Ptaah As you know, out of my own interest I have concerned myself with this case, have actually been researching the truth in the present of that time and have been able to fathom the real facts of the happenings then and there. In the process I have also been confronted with the real culprit, Jack the Ripper, who called himself Dr. Thomas Neill Cream, was born on May 27, 1850 and was executed on November 15, 1892. This man was indeed the murderer, Jack the Ripper, who was also caught, sentenced to death and then executed.

I am also aware of the latest claims of the two new scientists, Dr. Jari Louhelainen and David Miller, as well as the claim that the scarf in question was found at one of the crime scenes of a Ripper murder. And since I was already interested in these murders and the Ripper at the time of the happenings, it was also the case with regard to the scarf; therefore I also went back to that time for it and found out that this corpus delicti belonged neither to one of the victims nor to Jack the Ripper, but to a 'domestic worker' in a noble family, Edgcombe, who had lost the scarf as I could see there and then.

Billy Aha, and that about Jack the Ripper, who was effectively called Dr. Thomas Neill Cream; that is absolutely and incontrovertibly certain? Indeed, I do not doubt your words because it is only a rhetorical question.

Ptaah It has been answered.

Billy Of course. Then the following: instead of a religious delusional belief, earthlings should reflect on and turn to the reality of reality and its truth, learn to think for themselves rather than let themselves be preached all imaginable impossible nonsense by clergymen, priests and other sectarians and believe and obey without thinking. The earthlings should finally comprehend and really understand that they should free themselves from all delusion-believing and use their own brains and consciousnesses for thinking, considering and recognising the truth as well as for the self-deciding of all things and for action in every regard. How low the intelligentum and how simple-minded a human being must be if he/she does not comprehend that and does not understand and does not notice that all and everything, every thought and every feeling, every action and everything in general is not determined by an imaginary god, as the clergy, preachers and sectarians and so forth fantasise and lie about in order to lull the human beings into an irrational belief and make them unfree and dependent on a delusional belief. And this dependency and unfreedom also serve to make all human beings who have fallen prey to the delusional belief and are dependent and unfree, also shut their mouths to all and everything and toe the line when they are harassed, exploited and more and more restricted in their personal freedom by government orders. However, the delusional belief hides all that, and namely also the fact that both religions and state structures cooperate and together keep the people under a control that restricts their freedom; consequently they do not dare to protest, namely not even when they notice and feel that they are oppressed, cheated and exploited.

Religions and sects do not want any independently thinking human beings, but believers and obedient ones, belief-submissive ones and knee-crawlers, who let themselves be enslaved and held down and exploited by a delusional belief – financially, but frequently also heterosexually, homosexually, masochistically, sadistically and paedophilically. Digital sectarianism of all kinds also contributes to this to a very large extent, whereby their sermons and other lie stories serve only to catch the believers. Everything is directed at the human beings who are simple-minded and do not think for themselves, wherethrough entire nations, due to the god-delusion belief, are dominated solely by religions and sects and are indoctrinated to transform into enemies of other human beings because these are of other god-delusion beliefs. In this form the peoples of Earth are dominated by delusional belief, commit murder for their delusional belief and practice terror, hatred, revenge and retribution to the point of death, in the delusional belief that they will be allowed to squat in heaven at the feet of their imaginary God and kiss his foul-smelling fins (feet).

That, dear friend, is what I really wanted to say today, because repeatedly various sectarians have harassed me again by telephone in the middle of the night with their slimy attempts at conversion, even in the early hours of the morning from the USA.

Ptaah There is probably no comment to be made on this, because obviously you really only wanted to say how persistent and obtrusive the whole maliciousness of religious and sectarian mendacity is.

Billy Exactly, it just had to come out again. But now I still have some things that we should talk about together privately, if you still have time for it?

Ptaah Of course, but you need sleep.

Billy I am still alright.

Ptaah If you say so.

Billy Yes, I mean that. So then...
