

Facts About the Corona Vaccinations

Excerpt from the 769th contact from Saturday, the 17th of April, 2021

Asket But why did you not answer the question about the behaviour in relation to an immunisation?

Billy You are probably referring to the woman's question as to whether she should be vaccinated, and with which preparation?

Asket Yes.

Billy Well, this is something that Sfath has already told me, that I should never do such a thing and must not do it, because, in any case and in every respect, every human being must have the right, and has the right, to decide everything for himself/herself, no matter in which concern and thing; consequently, he/she must not allow himself/herself to be influenced in any form by a third party. But that is exactly what you said too, girl, and I have kept to it for my long life and have done well with it.

Asket Yes, I remember that.

Billy Exactly. Therefore I cannot and must not allow myself to tell or even advise any human being whether or not they should be vaccinated, because in any case it must always be and remain their own decision, also because it would be irresponsible; because a positive or negative effect or non-effect can be connected with a vaccination, or there can even be late effects that only appear days, weeks, months, years or even decades later in some form or another, in which case it cannot even be determined that these are late effects of a vaccination or any other earlier medication and so forth. Therefore, under no circumstances must I get involved in giving advice to a human being as to whether or not he/she should be vaccinated; consequently, everyone has to think about it for himself/herself and come to his/her own decision as to what he/she want to do or not. Now, if I disregard the inoculation and only consider simple aches and pains, such as headaches and so forth, which are just temporary ailments, then that is something different, because here and there I can give advice from my own experience, such as for a curative action or a natural remedy or something.

Asket That may well be the case, but I would be interested to know what you can explain in more detail regarding the worldwide spread of the rampantly spreading disease and the protective measures against it?

Billy You are probably referring to vaccines and vaccinations and so forth?

Asket Yes.

Florena I would also be interested in your knowledge.

Billy If that is so important for you! – Well, on the one hand, I have already said that I am not allowed to give any advice or prompt for anything. Therefore, I can only try to explain a few things, although I think that you – but it is all the same –, so I will just throw together everything that comes to mind and that I think should be said:

That which is to be expected from and after a corona vaccination, and which risks are associated with it, has been discussed many times over the years between Ptaah and me. Consequently, you probably know this too, which is why it does not need to be repeated. Therefore I can talk about other things, for example, about why everything happened so quickly, how irresponsible ones made horrendous profits with only distilled water and salt solutions as alleged vaccines, which caused many deaths, but which has not been ascertained to this day and consequently could not be made known, because no human being cared about it, because no one cared about reality, no one thought further and also had no interest in finding out anything other than just that which was officially happening at the moment, which was interesting and sensational in the realm of destiny, and so on. The principle has always been and continues to be the same: 'What I don't know won't hurt me.' Nobody wants to know what is really happening and what is going on and what will result and arise in the future. Therefore, due to the pandemic of the rampantly spreading corona virus disease and the associated fear and insecurity of the human beings, corporations can rake in enormous profits through vaccines and – at the expense of the health and life of humanity – effectively test their vaccines that have not yet really been tested, which they would otherwise have to do with special test subjects who volunteer for it and would have to be paid. This is done, to thoroughly test the vaccines to be produced in trials lasting many years until they are developed into effectively valuable vaccines.

1. Fundamentally, for every medicine and therefore also for every vaccination there is no guarantee, because all substances of this kind have side effects sooner or later; consequently the vaccines against the rampantly spreading Covid disease are no exception. Moreover, all the corona vaccines are new and untested, therefore now firstly millions of human beings are being used as test subjects in order to gain experience with the quick-quick vaccines by means of free mass tests, whereby, however, regardless of millions of vaccinated ones, the test results are very limited and, moreover, many deaths have to be mourned due to these tests. And this is an indisputable fact, which makes many human beings unsure and consequently they shy away from such vaccinations.
2. That which Ptaah and his colleagues have summarised with regard to a corona vaccination, precisely what can be expected after such a vaccination, what risks arise from it and why these new vaccines have now been made available so very quickly, corresponds not only to irresponsibility on the part of the vaccine manufacturers, but to an unparalleled profiteering due to the anxiety, fear and the abused trust of the populations in medicine.
3. The Corona inoculation is not safe in any form whatsoever, as the Plejarian research indicates, because it is unresearched. It normally takes earthlings up to 15 years or more in order to develop new vaccines on a responsible basis. This would also be necessary with regard to the corona virus, in which case, however, after less than a year after the outbreak of the pandemic, a vaccine was made available for dubious and fatal use – as a super-premiere, so to speak. This action and its consequences made many human beings feel insecure, because instead of maintaining safety and doing everything necessary to contain the rampantly spreading corona disease, science and the authorities have failed, not done the right thing and also worked inaccurately and irresponsibly.
All vaccines and medicines to fight the rampantly spreading corona disease were simply thrown on the market, and indeed without being rigorously tested for their safety before being approved, because all the manufacturing companies did not carry out all the necessary studies, as the responsibility and the life safety and health of the populations would have demanded in the first place.
4. Everything had to happen fast and faster, mainly due to the fact that the WHO and the sciences had been asleep and had not switched gears early enough when the first corona cases appeared as early as the mid-1970s, which, however, were not recognised as such but were wrongly judged as flu variations, and indeed again and again over about 4.5 decades, during which the corona virus mutated some 5,000 times. Ultimately, the first effective outbreak of the rampantly spreading disease occurred in China in January 2019, but this was not recognised as a corona virus, thus the whole thing was able to spread in the form of an effective rampantly spreading corona virus disease until November, that is to say, December, and lead to a pandemic, which was nevertheless only recognised as such in Wuhan in December 2019.
5. For the development of the corona vaccine – supposedly due to its urgency – quickly great sums of money were invested and rapid steps were taken towards the parallel approval of new vaccines, instead of the successive process that is usually followed. The whole thing may have cost more than usual, but is supposed to have saved valuable time. The question is, however, what this joke of an excuse is supposed to say in the connection with ‘quickly invested large sums of money for the approval of new vaccines’. At the same time excuses were given that there had already been some research findings, namely that the corona virus was closely related to the SARS virus that appeared in 2002. This SARS virus then disappeared again – and as Ptaah said, according to the Plejarian research there was no connection between this and the corona virus. In any case, it is claimed that the alleged preliminary work has helped the vaccine manufacturing companies to find an effective vaccine against the corona virus after ‘very quick’ study results. This is also said to have shown that a new corona vaccine could be presented that proved the efficacy and safety of a good vaccine. Therefore it was reviewed by independent regulatory authorities and approved immediately. Such a procedure is called a ‘rolling review’, which, as I looked it up, means ‘a procedure is continued for as long as relevant data provides sufficient results to allow a formal approval and a risk-benefit value to be recognised and to enable usage, and, if an acceleration of a matter takes place, the requirements for this regarding the quality, safety and efficacy must be high.’ However, I do not know to what extent this actually was the case and is the case. But I do know that all vaccines so far, which also came to be used and continue to be used, have not been properly tested for negative effects or late effects or even long-term damage to health, as I know from Ptaah.

6. That which has been explained under the previous 5 points is only a part of the whole, while the manufacturing companies and authorities claim, however, that they have worked together particularly efficiently and flexibly and have therefore accelerated the process, which would otherwise have taken years, which, however, is denied by you Plejaren because this is not possible and consequently products created in this form could at any rate, in one case or another, cause serious damage to health, for example, also coronary artery inflammation and so forth, or even in many cases death as a result of other organ diseases caused by the vaccines. Nevertheless, a conditional approval was granted for the vaccines at an early stage and continues to be granted, even though they are not fully developed and therefore research on and with them is ongoing. Of course, the manufacturing companies gain more and more new data and also new safety and efficacy of the vaccines, but at the cost of the lives of many human beings who downrightly serve as test objects – often out of fear for which they, under some circumstances, have to pay with long-lasting suffering, illnesses or death. And since those in government around the world have completely failed in their inability to govern from the very beginning and continue to fail completely – which means that they could neither stop the whole rampantly spreading disease at the beginning of its emergence, nor can they stop it now, because even now they are explicitly doing the wrong thing in contrast to the right thing that should be done – the first wave of mixed mutation can take hold now, which Ptaah warned some time ago would come, which was also discussed in a contact conversation and the whole thing was then uploaded to the internet and published. All the ‘smart ones’ of virology, epidemiology and governments and so forth, have not bothered about this, however, and have continued to muddle along in the useless framework they have started because they still call the new wave of the new mixed mutation the 3rd wave, although it is the 1st wave of a new form of rampantly spreading disease.
7. Banally, in response to doubting questions, the vaccine manufacturers flatly assert that reactions to vaccinations are completely normal, which may indeed be so according to the human health constitution as is confirmed by Ptaah and the Plejaren scientists and so forth, but it is completely abnormal for long-term damage or even death to be associated with them. If this were the case, however, it would correspond to an unparalleled irresponsibility, because then the corresponding vaccines would not correspond to what they ought to be.
8. As far as I know, for example, it happened that after a corona vaccination with the Biontech/Pfizer, Moderna and Astra Zeneca vaccines (as of February 2021), most persons had inflammatory redness or pain at the injection sites, swelling or other discomforts and even nasty reactions, as well as fever, swollen lymph nodes, nausea or general feelings of illness, as was ascertained by the Plejaren. And as a rule, Ptaah said, this affected up to 9 out of 10 vaccinated persons. How often such reactions occur today I do not know because Ptaah is absent, and so I do not have any new information, indeed not even on how many human beings have died or are currently dying due to vaccination problems.
9. Since I am now talking about these things, it might be good if I also explain something for all the persons who read our conversation reports, because in my life I have often experienced that many human beings do not know about the significance vaccinations actually have, what they effect and how everything works. Also, many do not know what is actually to be understood by the immune system, which is why I think that I should at least explain what I have learned and know, which can perhaps make the whole thing a little more understandable for some human beings. Unfortunately, the doctors and so forth, do not usually explain this to their patients.
 - a) So: the immune system is the physical-organic defence system that ensures that pathogens of all kinds are fought and an infection is prevented when bacteria, germs, fungi, parasites or viruses enter the organism.
 - b) However, the immune system is not an organ in its own right, although the large intestine must be emphasised especially.
 - c) The immune system corresponds to a vital necessity, because it protects the body from pathogens and pathogenic cell changes and generally from harmful substances of various kinds, whereby it comprises various proteins, organs and cell types in this respect, while it does not make itself noticeable to the human being in a normal state of health, but it will do so explicitly when pathogens of any kind attack the organism. To repeat, it can be said that as long as the body's own immune defence functions smoothly, it is not noticeable.

- d) The immune system includes primary lymphatic organs, which also include the bone marrow and the sweetbread, which is actually called the thymus. The thymus as primary lymphatic organ is located in the thorax behind the breastbone, if I remember correctly how Sfath explained it to me – it has just been a while since then, which is why I cannot remember everything exactly.

I still remember, however, that during childhood the thymus increases up to about 40 grams or so in weight and also in size, but it reduces in size again after puberty.

The thymus – where T cells, which are called T lymphocytes or something like that and which correspond to a group of white blood cells that mature in the thymus – serves the immune function, whereby these T cells, if I am still getting it together correctly, together with B lymphocytes, call forth an acquired immune response.

All this together forms certain defence cells, namely the so-called lymphocytes, which correspond to secondary lymphatic organs to which the lymph nodes as well as the tonsils and the spleen belong, as well as certain tissues in various mucous membranes of the body organism, such as the intestinal system.

The immune function, and thus the defence against pathogens by the immune system of the entire human organism, includes entire organs, such as not only the blood but also the body's skin and the mucous membranes, the vascular systems, the lymphatic channels, the so-called lymphatic organs, but also proteins and individual cells, and in particular the large intestine. In that context I still remember that Sfath particularly pointed out that certain organs, such as the skin and the mucous membranes, have a barrier function against pathogens in the first place, while they have a protective function against pathogenic pollutants and parasites penetrating the body and its inner organism from the outside. The whole of the defensive strength of this natural protective factor, Sfath explained, can and should be additionally supported and strengthened with certain natural means in the case of deficiency symptoms, namely by additionally supplying the body with special substances necessary for the entire organism in addition to the normal food. Nowadays these kinds of substances are produced as food supplements and are available commercially, however, when buying such products, one has to pay attention to really good quality because much shenanigans and fraud is practised with such products in order to make profit. Consequently, it is highly advisable to take the precaution of buying such products only from specialist shops.

That which further needs to be taken into account in this context is the fact that the foodstuffs of all kinds that can be bought in shops today are, on the one hand, contaminated during the production process with harmful substances that are hazardous to the health of the human organism – and this also applies to organic products to a greater or lesser extent, although this is denied counter to the truth – or that correspond practically to purely chemical products, which nowadays make up a predominantly large part of the foods on offer which are destined for the human beings.

That which is further to be said about this corresponds to the fact that certain physicians, doctors and 'nutritionists' untruthfully deny the entire facts of the necessity of additional food supplements for certain human beings who need such substances because there are too many toxins and too few effective natural valuable nutrients in today's food; consequently, many human beings need certain ones of these food supplements. However, as I said, caution is advised when procuring them, because there is much fraud and deception carried out with these products, thus they should only be purchased from specialist shops.

Food supplements fundamentally correspond to products that are especially produced for the enhanced supply to the human metabolism. They contain certain nutrients or active substances, namely mainly vitamins and minerals, trace elements and secondary plant substances and so forth.

The mucous membranes contain bacteria-inhibiting substances, as in the respiratory tract the ciliated hairs, in the tear fluid of the cell walls, as well as that in the mouth saliva many inhaled pathogens are eliminated at an early stage because they stick and are usually removed or destroyed again. Many other pathogens that are ingested with the food and reach the stomach are also destroyed at an early stage, before they are able to cause any damage, namely by the stomach acid.

However, what still needs to be said is that the bulk of the immune system, that is to say, its defence cells are located in the large intestine, at least that is what I still remember Sfath teaching me, but what Ptaah also recently explained again. In the case of vaccinations, these react in the same form as in the case of an actual infection, in which case human beings, who react sensitively to vaccinations, can feel the immune system becoming active, while these human beings, under some circumstances, then feel unwell and sickly for a few days, as I also know from my own experience when I had to be vaccinated against cholera and so forth, in the Orient or in Africa. Slight fever, nausea, feeling miserable or headaches and so forth, can be normal consequences of vaccinations, because vaccines trigger corresponding symptoms of illness, wherethrough the immune system begins to work against them and produces antibodies. However, such temporary symptoms are normal and are part of the natural immune system reaction to vaccinations, although they usually only last a few days, are mostly mild and normally resolve quickly.

With vaccines that have really been thoroughly tested and are effectively effective – as I know from Ptaah, and I can rely on his explanations; indeed contrary to those that our earthling ‘experts’ announce – no serious side effects occur at all. In fact, severe side effects do occur from time to time with certain vaccines currently in use, which is the case with vaccines that have not been sufficiently tested and are effectively not of premium quality. It is indeed claimed that there is currently no evidence whatsoever of serious side effects with any of the approved vaccines, however, reality proves otherwise, as one hears again and again from various places. In very rare cases, an allergic, that is to say, anaphylactic shock can occur directly after vaccination, as Ptaah said, because he had observed that long-term suffering and the aforementioned shocks and so forth had occurred with corona vaccinations, in addition to various kinds of other vaccination damage, such as coronary vessel inflammation and various other kinds of serious damage. This happens on the one hand, he said, while, on the other hand, due to vaccinations various health problems will arise even after several decades, the cause of which, however, can no longer be determined. With allergic reactions, so it is claimed, they occur in human beings who have suffered from such phenomena in the past, to which he said, however, that this only applies to about 25-30 per cent of such cases who have also reacted allergically to certain medicines; consequently the majority of such allergic reactions in human beings affected by the vaccination can be traced back to an ‘unclean’, that is to say, an immature vaccine.

As far as allergic reactions are concerned, there will also be vaccine-related delayed side effects, that is to say, subsequent side effects, which could therefore also have long-term damaging effects on the body, about which, however, he cannot say anything precise yet. Delayed appearing side effects with negative long-term consequences, however, are unavoidable as a result of the irresponsible use of insufficiently tested vaccines, whereby no exact knowledge of their effects exists at present, but these excesses will inevitably occur, the causes of which, however, would then not be able to be explained. Ptaah said, it is simply irresponsibly claimed that such delayed side effects are unlikely, however, the future will prove the opposite, with the effective causes then being attributed to false causes. Also the fact which Ptaah has explained – contrary to all other claims of the terrestrial experts – that according to the Plejarian research results the vaccines used in various cases exert a certain influence on the DNA, that is to say, the genetic material of human beings, is simply denied. It is simply claimed that it is unlikely, even though no research has been done in this regard nor has any knowledge been gained about the human DNA not being affected or even changed by the corona vaccination – and such an unverified claim is then simply taken as truth. It is simply claimed, without verification, that the genetic information contained in the vaccine does not come into contact with human DNA – and that's that – and that is simply so because it is well packaged in the cell nucleus and therefore cannot be affected. This is supposed to apply equally to the genetic material in the female egg cell and in the male sperm, because none of the vaccines supposedly has any influence on them. Ptaah stated that the Plejarian indeed also had not yet acquired any knowledge in this regard but were conducting research, in which case it was negligent to simply make an assertion without research, which was equally the case with regard to women's fertility. The entirety of such assertions also corresponds to an unparalleled irresponsibility, because no research has been carried out yet in this regard in connection with the corona vaccination and consequently also no relevant results have been achieved yet.

Well, that which I finally have to say about the whole thing is that not only vaccines, but ultimately every medicine has side effects; consequently, a vaccination against the rampantly spreading corona disease is no exception. Moreover – and this is the crux of the matter – everything concerning the corona vaccines is absolutely new and effectively completely insufficiently researched, insufficiently tested and still so limited in terms of accumulated experience that even today everything is not clear and not safe. In summary, however, this means that it is still not possible to recognise what will result after all the millions of corona vaccinations that are now coming and what can be expected, such as what risks will be associated with them and what will ultimately result from them. Nor can the question yet be answered as to what benefit or disadvantage will result from the corona vaccinations for the whole of Earth's humanity. And whether the fast tracked knocking up of corona vaccines will ultimately prove to be a premiere or a last performance, will not be revealed in the near future but only in the more distant future. Talking more about it is senseless and would be tantamount to me carrying water into the sea to fill it up.
