

Newsletter 10 – February 2023

www.figu-england.co.uk

www.figu.org

Group update

by Jonathan Steven

Welcome to the 10th FIGU England newsletter. If you're reading this, then you must have a more than passing interest in the work of Eduard (Billy) Meier who has devoted his life to the communication and clarification of the creational-energy teaching which describes at its heart the meaning of our life and existence. Heavy stuff. And it is.

Follow the teaching long enough and sooner or later you'll be faced with revelations of a consciousness, psychological, technological, philosophical, and ideological nature that will test the boundaries of your existing knowledge and wisdom. However, despite this we do try to keep it real. We're a small group of English people (and one French person as we do like to foster a mildly international flavour to the group). We have normal lives, we have careers, we have families, we have friends, but we share a commitment to unravelling the wisdom contained within the creational-energy teaching, learning from it and then making positive changes to our lives. We do this in a manner which supports self-responsibility, free speech, the recognition of and the necessity of making mistakes and the principle of not imposing our thoughts and ideas upon other people. The "F" in FIGU is "Free." We are always mindful that a core component of the creational-energy teaching is to nurture and foster the ability to think clearly and independently for ourselves.

The group meets on a monthly basis predominantly via Skype on the second Saturday of every month. In 2022 the meeting format settled into a routine that works for the group and is made up of three components. During the first part of the meeting, group business is discussed. During the second part a short break and group meditation is undertaken and then during the third part group members or new attendees can present, discuss, or ask questions on anything that they're studying, reflecting upon, or are simply completely bamboozled by. The meetings provide opportunities for discussion, fellowship and learning in an atmosphere which is mature enough to recognise differences of opinion. This fosters times when on occasion we are not all in collective agreement, however we consider this to be a good thing and healthy for the group as constructive disagreement allows us to learn.

With group meetings continuing to be predominantly conducted on a virtual basis, our occasional catch-ups together in person are extremely welcome. We met together in August of 2022 for our summer nature ramble and outdoors barbeque. In May 2023 the group is planning to hold its first weekend retreat. As a break from everyday work and commitments the group intends to use the time for discussion, reflection, fellowship and healthy outdoor activity. My mountain bike is prepped and ready to go.

The group has an ongoing internet presence through the primary FIGU-England website and through social media via the FIGU-England Facebook page. The three off-shoot websites that were established in 2021 to promote key aspects of the FIGU mission also continue to be active.

These being;

- 1) Overpopulation awareness
- 2) Spreading the correct peace symbol
- 3) A countdown timer / timetable for the peace meditation.

The style of the main website continues to be of a more formal nature whereas the Facebook page reflects more visual content via images and videos. Facebook interest comes from mostly, as you would expect, people from the United Kingdom however the United States and China also account for a significant amount of interest. Approximately 75% of all FIGU-England Facebook interest is from these three countries so we extend a warm hello and welcome to all our American and Chinese friends.

In addition to our promotion of key FIGU issues via our internet pages the group also writes occasional, targeted letters to key individuals in positions of power and influence to raise awareness as to the key issues affecting our society in particular the current impact upon our climate of overpopulation.

In June and July of 2022, on two separate Saturdays the group hosted an exhibition stand in the market square at Cambridge. Exhibition stand days are always highly enjoyable especially since the group deploys an engagement strategy of displaying the FIGU material and then allowing the general public to ask questions and make their own minds up. This fosters an excellent open debate on a wide range of subjects, those discussions having been generated and stimulated by the general public themselves and not by the group. The group continues to translate, refine and update flyers / booklets for circulation and exhibition days are key events where the general public has access to the new material. In addition, for 2022 the exhibition stand banner reflected the Overpopulation symbol and it was fascinating to notice the associated jump in people asking questions about overpopulation. Group members noted that 2022 saw a marked increase in interest in the creation-energy teaching, the reason for which we can only speculate. It will be interesting to see if this trend continues in 2023.

As we head into 2023 the level of uncertainty around us appears to be increasing with both England and the world facing significant political, demographic, climatological and financial challenges. Unfortunately, no one is coming to save us, our future is what we make it and this group as one of many FIGU groups around the world is a small start contributing towards what will hopefully be a brighter future. We're looking forward to 2023 and what we can learn and achieve. If you're new to FIGU and you're reading this material for the first time, then well done for getting this far and we look forward to meeting you at some point in the future.

The game of life

by Karl Beaney

Even before the worldwide events of recent years, but ever more so given the coronavirus pandemic, the rising cost of all products necessary for living, financial and employment concerns, threatening/looming war actions etc., it has become increasingly clear that many individuals are struggling with life at the moment. That is not a criticism, just an observation. Indeed, it is understandable that many human beings find living in today's world difficult. Not only are the aforementioned issues present, we also face inequity at every level of society, the evaporation of traditional (and good) values, addictions, criminality, health care issues, political and societal chaos, pollution, environmental destruction, the rapid loss of the natural world and so on and so forth. The list could be almost endless, currently!

When I ask myself why is this situation so - namely many individuals and society as a whole struggling to find a good, healthy and progressive path - the answer appears to be multifarious but when considered from a Creation-energy teaching point of view the issues can be boiled down to, what I see as, one main reason for the problem.

Digressing for a moment will help me explain my thinking.

Should one want to master a game, one must learn and fully understand the rules of that game before mastery is achieved. Whether the chosen game is Chess, football, snooker or a card game, it matters not. A player at a high level of said game will always have a good grasp of the rules that underpin that game.

When it comes to life in the 21st century with all of its confusing propaganda, fear inducing media, false leaders, religions, conspiracy theories and irrational philosophies/movements/lifestyles it is little wonder why many human beings struggle to integrate themselves into a healthy, progressive and fulfilled life path. In short, many individuals do not know the rules that govern the game of life - I don't consider life to be a game as such. Certainly, it is much more serious than that, yet I am of the opinion that life shouldn't be taken too seriously either - my analogy here is merely in the sense that there are laws/principles/rules/recommendations that govern all life and if these (laws etc.) are recognised and followed by human beings the resulting knowledge helps us, as individuals, to prepare, face and deal with the events that life presents us. In this sense, life is no different to a game. If one doesn't know about the rules/laws that underpin life itself, it will be difficult to find true meaning in life and therefore to get the most out of the game/life by finding a positive and progressive path through it/life.

The Creation-energy teaching, as brought to us by BEAM and FIGU, is an ancient teaching which was realised, brought together and taught to life forms throughout the universe by Nokodemion (and subsequent incarnations of Nokodemion) and individuals, civilisations, races, groups etc. who have obligated themselves to disseminating this teaching so that evolution and peace can thrive throughout the universe. The teaching is based in the recognition of the rules/laws that govern the universe and EVERYTHING therein, including human beings. So, when a human being is aware of the laws of the Creation/universe/nature (the creational laws and recommendations), acknowledges these and tries to honestly live according to them, then an understanding of the laws of life emerges.

Because belief is inferior to knowledge and the Creation-energy teaching is founded upon reality, truth and knowledge, any honest effort to implement these laws and recommendations (cause) will bring a corresponding result (effect) which amounts to a lived, practical experience. This process requires no belief and creates knowledge. In this way we can see that having an understanding of the Creation-energy teaching is like being aware of the rules of the game of life. If one is aware of the rules of this game then one can play it in a better way than if one does not know the rules, thus many of life's hardships can be navigated in a better and less troublesome manner.

Problem: Many human beings struggling with life in the 21st century.

Cause of the problem: Human beings, generally, not knowing the rules (creational laws and recommendations) for the game called life.

Once a problem has been acknowledged and the reason for its existence has been fathomed it is somewhat easier to solve the problem. As this is an article intended for publication for an already FIGU aware readership, the next questions are:

- 1) What can be done by the few/minority who study and know about the Creation-energy teaching to remedy the situation?
- 2) Should anything be done by those few at all?

An individual or group of individuals who concern themselves with the Creation-energy teaching shouldn't remain silent or inactive, that is clear. Yet, my own experiences have shown me that merely talking about FIGU and the Creation-energy teaching (in an attempt to make others aware of it) to those who have not enquired about it is a fruitless endeavour. Because the free will of every human being should be respected, we can not force anything on anyone. So, should those of us that are aware of the Creation-energy teaching and it's life/evolution promoting effect(s) desire to help or contribute something positive to other individuals, the FIGU Mission or society/ humanity then our options are now becoming a little clearer. The best way (in line with the Creation-energy teaching) that I can see to address the problem highlighted above is by peaceful and progressive action that does not impinge anyone's free will. Therefore, in my eyes, education is the most appropriate action. This involves being present/available with explanations and/or educational material when asked by those who are interested. This is why it is so important that FIGU minded folk come together to form groups in the respective country. This group can learn together, as individuals and as a group, and from each other whilst maintaining a public profile (website, meetings, social media, information stands etc.). Thus making it easier for interested or open minded folk to find and research the Creation-energy teaching. In this way a human being furthers not only one's own learning but also, at the same time, furthers the learning of the interested parties.

Also, using the game analogy again, worth mentioning here is that merely recognising the creational laws and recommendations is not the end of the game. Quite the opposite, here on Earth it really only represents the very beginning of the real game. As we progress through the game of life (which never ends) and as we make steps of progress, new tasks/duties/responsibilities and consequently new rules have to be recognised, undertaken, understood and mastered before moving onto the next level, so to speak. This is just my own personal view but once the rules of this game called life have been somewhat comprehended surely the next task, or one of the following tasks, in order to progress is not to selfishly keep these rules to oneself but help these rules be known by all open or willing fellow human beings??

It seems appropriate to include the following excerpt from the booklet 'Leben Im Geistigen und Physischen' (Living in the spiritual and physical) by Billy and available here:

<https://shop.figu.org/schriften/kleinschriften/leben-im-geistigen-und-physischen?language=en>

“Es liegt wahrlich im Interesse des einzelnen Menschen, eine geistige und bewusstseinsmässige Erweiterung und Vertiefung anzustreben und zu erlangen und seine bisherige Lebensauffassung zu revidieren. Eine Lebensauffassung, die in rein materialistischen und irrationalen Glaubensbahnen verlief und dadurch die Wahrheit des Geistes in böse Verdammnis trieb. Die Umkehr aber wird nicht leicht sein, denn ihr Weg ist mit Ranken und Dornen verwachsen. In den entscheidendsten Wahrheiten müssen oft genau entgegengesetzte Pfade beschritten werden, denn der Mensch muss lernen, dass er durch die Existenz seines schöpferischen Geistes einen für alle Dauer unsterblichen Teil besitzt, nämlich den Geist. Einen Geist, der mit dem Schöpferischen zusammenwirkt und nicht eine knechtische Rolle spielt, wie dies in Kultreligionen dargelegt wird. Jeder Mensch muss sich selbst den Nachweis erbringen, dass sein Geist in schöpferischer Funktion arbeitet und in sich selbst seine Vervollkommnung finden muss, um in der Schöpfung selbst die Vollkommenheit zu gewährleisten. Jenem Menschen aber, der diese Erkenntnis erlangt, dem erwächst daraus eine unausweichbare Verpflichtung, das eigene materielle Leben in den Hintergrund zu stellen und sein geistiges Dasein zu den grossen Gesichtspunkten der Schöpfung zu führen, die in ihrer unaufhaltsamen Wandlung die endlose Dauer birgt."

"Truly, it is in the interest of each human being to strive for and obtain a «spiritual» (Creation-energy based) and consciousness-based expansion and deepening, and to revise his/her present view of life. A view of life which proceeded in purely materialistic and irrational belief-paths and therethrough drove the truth of the «spirit» (Creation-energy) into evil damnation. The turning back, however, will not be easy, for its way is overgrown with tendrils and thorns. Concerning the most crucial/decisive truths, often opposite paths have to be taken, for the human being must learn that through the existence of his/her creational «spirit» (Creation-energy), he/she possesses for all duration an immortal part, namely the «spirit» (Creation-energy) - a «spirit» (Creation-energy) that works together with the creational and does not play a menial/servile role, as it is explained in cult-religions. In fact, each human being must prove to himself/herself that his/her «spirit» (Creation-energy) works in a creational function, and that it must find its relative absolute fulfilment in itself in order to ensure the relative absolute fulfilment in the Creation itself. For the human being who has gained this cognition, there will grow an unavoidable obligation to put his/ her own material life in the background and to guide his/her «spiritual» (Creation-energy based) existence to the great viewpoints of the Creation, which inheres the endless duration in its unstoppable developmental change."

So, if one sees the direction the world is traveling in or if one sees fellow human beings struggling on a personal level, or one is personally impacted by the illogical and harmful actions of others and would like to do more than to just notice and complain about/lament the situation there is a relatively easy, effective and mutually beneficial response that is in line with the laws and recommendations of the Creation. (The Core-group of 49 at the SSSC in Switzerland serve as an excellent example and role model of this method.)

I should briefly mention demonstrations, protests, violence, breaking laws, petitions and a host of other actions that seem to be the usual methods for trying to bring about change in our society. I will leave it to you to decide upon their effectiveness, correctness/legality and their conformability to the Creation-energy teaching.

If one has been educated in the rules of the game called life, surely one must be willing and available to inform fellow players so they too can play with a fair hand! It is also important to be aware of the fact that the creational laws and recommendations are valid for the Creation itself and for every life form within the Creation, therefore these laws and recommendations apply to every individual human being and consequently every human being has a right to know about them. Whether these laws and recommendations are accepted or rejected is an entirely personal and different matter. This leads us on to the earlier question: Should anything at all be done by those that know about the Creation-energy teaching to help disseminate it to those that do not know about it? Well, this comes down to free will. Each individual bears self-responsibility for whatever he/she does with his/her learning, study, knowledge, time, life and so on. This in turn leads back to the law of cause and effect. Whatever we put into life is what we get out of it. This is true of life itself and every aspect therein.

Many human beings want to do something to improve this world and it is up to each of us to decide the best, most effective and/or most suitable way to do this and, then, whether we actually put any time and effort into bringing that action to fruition.

Excerpt from the German/English book 'Arahat Athersata' pages 36 & 38 sentences 129-136:

"Many attempts have been undertaken to bring truth and wisdom to the Earth human beings and therethrough to offer him/her a life of the knowledge about the Creation, in order to show him/her the way to the Creation and its laws and recommendations. All attempts remained unsuccessful, however, and without exception the ships of the truth ran aground and sank into the bottomless depths of the unintellect of the earthly Wesenheiten. The human beings who are searching for the truth have never grasped the root of the terrible things, so they were never able to find cognition. They were not able to grasp the root of the terrible things because they were bearers of a superficial and false sense of the life and lost their actual task, because they replaced the whirling sources of the endless BEING with unreal religious dogmas and allowed them to end in the insanity. That which is timeless is eternal, and truth and wisdom of the creational power and almightiness lie in the timeless eternity. The closer the human being comes to this truth and works himself/herself towards it, the easier it is for him/her to follow the laws and recommendations in creational regulation. Where the human being acknowledges and follows the truth of the Creation and its recommendations and laws, there shines brightly the regulation of all endless duration in his/her life. Stillness/repose, peace and love become the companions of the life through space and time and testify to the absolutely full development of creational harmony.“

Arahat Athersata

"The precious one who contemplates the times"

1. You are astonished to grasp my thoughts within you, but you will soon understand that you do not need your astonishment.
2. I am a spirit-form with the designation ARAHAT ATHERSATA, thus named after an old language of yours.
3. My existence in material form has ended since time immemorial and has found itself in the BEING of a sphere which is foreign to you, to which you are still far subordinate.
4. The time of my BEING has become an existence in the great sea of the duration.
5. It has become knowledge and wisdom, power and might in following of the laws within and around the Creation.
6. In the endless duration, the spirit has freed itself from the body and pushed the rebirth to the bygone past.
7. It has become close to Creation, powerful and mightful, in aspiring completion of the absolutely full development.
8. My thoughts reach into you to inspire a writing which you should write down.
9. As the viewer of the times I recognised the truth of the things in their origins and in their consequences, which I will now reveal through you in words comprehensible to you human beings.
10. So follow my thoughts and put them down in lasting and good, legible writing.

Arahat Athersata

Arahat Athersata

shop.figu.org

The flower in full bloom

by Gregory Cherifi

At the heart of a green scene with many flowers beckoning and calling to her, she stands still while blooming in full health and vigour, revealing the eternal freshness and rejuvenating beauty of Mother Nature in this vast wilderness that unfortunately remains under the constant threat of the toxic greed, vicious hatred and senseless poison of rampant humanity with its endless mess and polluting landfills... but you, the flower in full bloom, remain calm and serene, in the glow and warmth of Father Sun that embraces you and makes you radiant in the midst of all these restless flowers that have covered this beautiful world on this special day. You are the Vvedenskyi tulip 'Bernadette', and your name blossoms in me every day since then with a little thought for you, so that my lips may bloom again with intimate words of peace and love, for without your graceful presence my inner world and the garden of life would have remained dark and dull, where nothing beautiful could ever blossom and flourish for eternity... Thanks to you

Freedom - Part 3

by Aleksander Pogroszewski

The subconscious WE-form.

It is important to understand that although we perceive ourselves as individuals, and most certainly are different in our personalities and character, we are also intrinsically connected with all and everything in our entire universe.

(FIGU Bulletin No 107, March 2020) pg.9

The subconscious describes depth psychologically an area of the human psyche, which embodies a factor that is formed by the function and nature of thoughts and the corresponding feelings that arise from them. The subconscious resp. the subconscious - which is not to be equated with the unconscious and therefore has nothing to do with it - is not directly accessible to the consciousness, but only indirectly, but is underlying it, and has been so since the origin and formation of mankind (hominisation) resp. anthropogenesis or anthropogeny, resp. the evolutionary formation of the human characteristic structure, but also in relation to the individual human being (ontogenesis) resp. his development as an individual being. According to the Pleiadian doctrine of depth psychology, the subconsciousness in all its forms is understood to mean that every human being goes through subconscious psychological processes in all phases of life, which also influence his thoughts, which in turn form his feelings and from these form the state of mind. Furthermore, through the decisive influence and impact of the impulses from the subconscious on the consciousness, the actions and activities of the person also result, which are directed in certain ways. As a whole, all impulse values are processed rationally and according to the degree of the predominant intelligence by the conscious awareness and recognition of the impulse processes - or the impulse inspiration from the subconscious - and from this, corresponding thoughts and feelings are created and thus the psyche is shaped.

Pg.10

Just as no universe can 'slip' into another, no human being is able to pass on his consciousness, not even individual factors of it. So no human being can use his consciousness to enter a foreign consciousness in order to take possession of it, as delusional believers mistakenly assume in relation to possession. Every human being has his own conscious consciousness resp. total consciousness, his own spirit form, his own subconscious, his own character and memory forms as well as his own unconscious forms etc. Consequently, there is a so-called isolation of consciousness between the individual human beings. Every human being has his own spirit form as well as his block of consciousness, i.e. his consciousness with all levels of consciousness, the mental block (= consciousness, thoughts and feelings and psyche), subconsciousness, personality, character and memory forms as well as unconsciousness forms, etc. Everything is individual, so to speak the property of the respective person. Nevertheless, the human being is part of a WE-form, because in the whole life everything is interdependent, otherwise there would be no overall development. The one is dependent on the other, in the whole universe, i.e. in the respective space-time-structure or the respective dimension of our DERN-universe. So, what happens in our space-time-structure resp. in our dimension of our universe is also perceived by the human being on earth, but not consciously, but only subconsciously and also through his single cells in his whole body. All forms of life, whether it is a human being, a bacterium, a bird or a fish etc., can be perceived, always perceive subconsciously what happens somewhere in our DERN-universe, i.e. in our present space-time-structure resp. our dimension and stores itself in it as subterranean information, because in the respective universe everything is connected with each other - the smallest particle with the largest and the largest with the smallest - and penetrates into the subconscious of the life forms and thus sooner or later also into the conscious consciousness, if this is confronted with it by any circumstances. This also means that cognitions, inventions, etc. that are made can be absorbed and become conscious by every other person who is intensively engaged with the matter. Under certain circumstances he/she may even use the same wording - which then does not correspond to plagiarism, because the person receiving the impulse may not know anything about the other person and may not know the process.

(GOT p.515)

140. "Your own consciousness is collectively connected through your subconscious mind with your fellow human beings of your whole humanity and unites you, so that it is possible for you to experience and overlook many things or to experience the same thing in a certain small number at the same time, to have the same thoughts, to do the same thing or to invent the same thing."

(FB No:107) Pg.13

The subconscious of the human being itself is also nothing fixed, but an ongoing process. Through thoughts and their feelings, the psyche and the consciousness or the entire mental block, which constantly creates new knowledge, new wisdom and generally new facts of knowledge and memories etc., which penetrate the subconsciousness, it is constantly programmed further. But also through the memory banks and the acutely current electromagnetic oscillations of the collective subconscious, new programming is constantly being created in the individual subconscious. The whole thing is, as already mentioned, a running process, consequently new information in the form of impulses is added again and again, which constantly reprogram and expand the subconscious. Every subconscious of all people in the matter-belt in our whole DERN-universe, namely in our space-time-structure/our dimension, absorbs everything in itself - like a sponge - that swings in the whole collective WE-subconsciousness. The human being does not perceive the whole process consciously, just as other life forms do not, because many things happen unconsciously or imperceptibly for the consciousness and many things happen subconsciously, namely on various levels of vibration, which the human being is not able to register by means of technical equipment. However, these vibrational connections are so finely differentiated that they do not harm humans or any other form of life in any way, because the vibrations are so specifically aligned that they can be tolerated.

(GOT p.467)

271) "Consider, you, as humankind of Earth, are a we-form and as such are connected more or less with one another through your thoughts and feelings as well as through your subconsciousness, and as you nourish and cherish negative or positive thoughts and feelings, so they strengthen themselves once you call them forth, and in this strengthening they can strike any of your fellow human beings,

through which they awake something resting in them that they bring to the coarse effect, although they had never previously thought about bringing it out and realising it; therefore you comprehensively bear the responsibility for your thoughts and feelings also for your fellow human beings, at least for those who are influenced through your mental and feeling-based impulsations and thereout carry out corresponding deeds or call forth thoughts and feelings in themselves of the same kind."

272) "So many of your fellow human beings very often have thoughts and feelings in them or carryout actions that in their origin lead back to you yourselves and that through the strengthening take effect in the others and call forth the corresponding reactions, which they then themselves reject and condemn, although they, like you, are also jointly responsible for them in accordance with the creational laws and recommendations, because they nonetheless act from out of themselves with the foreign thoughts and feelings that are striking them; and thus you can have thoughts and feelings for any things in you that you would never carry out into deeds etc, however, your fellow human being who has been struck by your thoughts and feelings, and who is not able to work them out and bring them under control, does carry them out."

The problem is that virtually the entire population of Earth is completely ignorant of the Energy & Power that their thoughts generate and the influence they thereby have on their fellow humans. The vast majority of the now more than 9 billion humans on our planet, have been led down the path of materialistic goals and aspirations and have allowed themselves to be kept in the dark regarding fluidal power and energy, and only think they have Five senses rather than the Seven we actually have.

(BEAM/Special Bulletin No 38, August 2007)

Thoughts and feelings do not only course through the brain, rather they also work beyond it and can be "transmitted", in the form of telepathy, across three light-seconds (around 900,000 kilometers) and be received and understood by another suitable brain.

And because feelings also arise from thoughts, for this reason humans can also feel it when they suddenly lose, or have lost, someone who they love, in the same way that they also suddenly know that they are needed by a human who lives far away or in the vicinity. Also, a look which "bores" into the back, a glass breaking inexplicably, or an object falling without reason, appertain to that.

As a rule, the reason for that is a particular human's strong thought-currents and the fine-matter-electromagnetic light-speed vibrations, respectively, fluidal energies, that come from them. The human momentarily directs his strong thoughts at a certain person (or persons) who then perceives these vibrations and recognises what is transmitted thereby.

So, fluidal energies free themselves from a human through strong thought-currents which are perceived by certain connected humans and are grasped as a hunch or are correctly interpreted.

And every human is capable of that and indeed through the correct function of the pineal gland (the gland; epiphysis cerebri [pineal body], which is situated on the upper section of the diencephalon [mid-brain or between brain]) which perceives visual stimulus, and so forth, in the centre of the brain, whereby however the precondition must always be that the human has not allowed the capacity of this factor to atrophy.

The fact is that the pineal gland is able to detect fine-material electromagnetic fields in a completely different frequency range, that is to say, to track and recognise them, like a sensor, and thereby receive information.

That likewise functions in regard to a look which "bores" into the back, or the nape of the neck, when, as a result of the thought-vibrations of the person who is the observer, the fact of the look directed at the back, or the nape of the neck, is recognised by the pineal gland and this information reaches the consciousness. The fluidal vibrations of the world of thoughts have nothing to do with the supernatural because there is nothing which is supernatural. The fluidal vibrations of the world of thoughts have nothing to do with the supernatural because there is nothing which is supernatural.

The fluidal vibrations of the thoughts are based on a factor which is called "fine-material", not, however, supernatural, because the supernatural does not exist, and, indeed, because that which is of fine-matter can be perceived with the seventh sense, respectively, with the perception, consequently it therefore lies far above that which can be observed by means of the coarse-material senses. Unfortunately the human assumes there are only five senses (hearing, seeing, touching, tasting, smelling,) although seven exist, whereby the two further ones are perceiving and feeling, whereby the latter is connected to the instinct and is fundamentally bound with the world of thoughts. The fluidal vibrations of the world of thoughts are coupled with the fluidal vibrations of the world of feelings and, in this form, the thoughts and feelings constantly go "on journeys" and, indeed, as a factor of the fine-material.

However, the current terrestrial technology is still, in the first years of the third millennia, not in a position to prove these fine-material vibrations, respectively, the fluidal vibrations, with apparatus, and thereby using coarse-material means, yet it is only a question of technical development and of time before they will, one day, be successfully proven.

Then it will also be recognised that that which is of fine-matter is based on the form of fine-material vibrations, respectively, on fluidal vibrations, as it will also be recognised that these fluidal energies and their forces are the fundamental factor of telepathy, levitation and clairvoyance, as well as of teleportation, and so forth.

In reality our material conscious does not generate thoughts and ideas in the way most people assume, everything is based on impulsations which are fed into the material conscious for it to work on and thereby through logical reasoning equalise those impulsations through 'Neutral Equalised Positive Thinking'.

(BEAM/Ur-Ur-Ur-Ur-Ur-Ur-Ur Origin of all Existence) p.77

In itself, the origin of the <idea> is easy to explain; namely that, similarly to the very first ur-ur-ur movement in the <Nothing-Vacuum> - it arises self-excitingly and unconsciously to the consciousness without any previous mental, emotional, or similar thought-framework causes. But contrary to the <Nothing-Vacuum>, the human being possesses a subconsciousness, in which tremendous information currents come together and is stored, which however, is not consciously accessible to the human being. However, these information currents are absorbed – without even a hint of a conscious or unconscious thought – as newly added elements in the subconscious. From there, these new information-based elements become self-excitingly active, combining, and becoming, thereby defining, and creating Ur-impulses which form themselves into signals, which then penetrate into the consciousness, and eventually becomes thought.

Consider nature and synchronicity, which can be seen with Insects Swarming, Fish Schooling and Murmuration in Birds, with the latter, Starlings can be seen in their thousands flying together at the same speed, equally distanced and moving in perfect harmony, this cannot be possible with the material senses alone, if it was their would not be sufficient time to react to the sudden changes of direction, especially when birds on either side of the flock have no possibility of seeing each-other, so logically there has to be an unseen network that controls the whole flock and keeps it in complete synchronicity, which is obviously the collective subconscious.

If you examine human behavioural patterns, one can also identify links to the WE-Subconscious. Take for example impulsations that lead human beings into a state of panic, due to their feelings and subsequent emotions clouding any rational or logical thought process;

- At the start of the COVID pandemic shops were being stripped of goods when the public feared supply chains would cease, retailers then had to place limits on purchases to be able to control the outcome. But in these types of situations events can quickly escalate and when fear turns into hysteria and humans 'get very badly out of control of the good human nature' (Ausartungen), the looting begins.

- Mass withdrawals from Banks when people fear their financial institutions are about to collapse, the institutions then having to stop or put limits on the withdrawing of funds, to prevent a disintegration.
- Fleeing from danger when crowds of human beings take flight on masse and end up crushing or trampling each other to death, this being a primal herd response the effects of which differ depending on the ability of each individual's ability to control their emotional responses and keep a clear head when all around is chaos.

Then there are fads, like the Rubik's cube, Skateboards, Hula hoops, Swatch watches, The Walkman, Ipods, etc. Trends in fashion, corsets, bikinis, miniskirts, suits, waistcoats, shirts and ties. But the list is endless over the ages but is always based on the current thinking at the time of the fad or trend and the more humans who think in a certain way the more others are subconsciously influenced by impulsations generated by the WE-Subconscious, if they allow themselves to be so persuaded!!

Music, however, has a profound effect on the Psyche;

(CR 611) Ptaah,

37. Music is for the human being one of the most important factors of life with regard to the formation of his/her thoughts, feelings and the psyche, because it imparts to him/her a value-consciousness, but unfortunately, not only in that which is good and positive, but also in the evil, negative and bad.

38. If the value and the might of the harmonious music is highly estimated, then the human being also feels uplifted and feels impulsations of the equalisedness, the love, the peace and freedom in themselves, whereby in the same wise also his/her morals and behaviour are equally influenced.

39. However, if the music is disharmonious, of inferior value to completely valueless, then the human becomes weighed down by aggressiveness and unequalisedness and finds no access to real love, to true peace and open freedom, as well as not to a valuable moral state and to corresponding modes of behaviour.

40. And on the earth today, exactly these evil, negative and bad forms prevail among countless human beings of earth of all ages, because they are caught by the might of this malicious and disharmonious music, which since the 1980s prevailed as 'fashionable' and in its spell transfixes all those human beings of Earth, who in themselves are even malicious, aggressive, unequalised, unhappy, unorderedly, abusive, negative, unsatisfied, often conscienceless, rebellious, and irrational ones.

Although some examples can be Geographic in their effect some take on global proportions, take for instance tobacco and the advent of the cigarette, in nearly every country and throughout each culture most human beings smoked, you were allowed to smoke anywhere, at work, in restaurants, places of entertainment, even public transport. The tobacco firms advertised everywhere, used prominent figures to promote smoking as normal or even trendy. However, one of the primary reasons for this phenomenon is the addiction and the subsequent thinking by millions if not billions of humans that "I really need a cigarette"!! Something as a former smoker I thought many times and heard reiterated by countless other smokers.

But the tobacco firms never mentioned the addiction to nicotine or the health implications of inhaling smoke and the subsequent carcinogenic effect, so the public remained ignorant until the health implications became apparent and litigation against the tobacco industry began and started to succeed, suddenly governments concerned themselves with the cost of medical care for those affected, banned the tobacco firms advertising, prohibited smoking in public places and began public awareness of the lethality and health issues associated with smoking. Then as progressively more humans started to think that smoking is not only unhealthy but a repugnant activity, a vilification took place of those that still smoked, whereby now most of the population no longer partake in the habit.

If you now take belief and faith on Earth into account, through the ages there have been countless religions and sects, from polytheism to monotheism, from sacrifices to all kinds of offerings, but all have in common subservience, blind faith and worship. It has always been important for those spouting any religious nonsense that their followers' worship and think about their God/Gods on a regular basis, to that end places of worship have been built for the regular submission by the faithful for fear of damnation and in the past also the non-believers in society being forced to worship or face man made consequences. The point is, that if many humans regularly think about imaginary God/Gods then this turns into a powerful might and is difficult for those humans who are primitive in their thinking to break free from, especially those who were religious in their previous lives and still need to work out truth and reality, from the deceptions.

In fact, religions can become addictive to the susceptible as Karl Marx's stated, "religion is the opium of the masses." It is apparent that as human beings through our subconscious connection to the Universal Consciousness are aware of a deeper connection to something and in our searching for truth have been led down numerous incorrect paths over many reincarnations by the deluded and mendacious ones, many are addicted to their misguided faith to the point of fanaticism, which can then spread like wildfire or a virus!!!

(CR 495)

Ptaah:

13. While you were doing the correction work, I read your article that is filed here, which I consider valuable and I want to say that it will be necessary for you to publish it in a bulletin, so that many Earth-humans read it and remember everything usefully.

Billy:

Good, because I was going to give it to you to read anyway. So I will also include it here in our conversation.

Happiness, Gewalt and other Behavioural Patterns of the Human Beings ...

Happiness and violence as well as all other patterns of human beings' behaviour are highly contagious and thus determine the behaviour of family members, friends, acquaintances, groups and of small and large masses of human beings. The behaviour of one individual can infect many others, because human brains respectively the thoughts arising from consciousness and the resulting feelings can infect each other. The correspondingly diverse forms of behaviour, which are built up from thoughts and the resulting feelings, range from joy, harmony, love, peace, freedom, happiness and violence to hatred, revenge, retribution, murder and suicide. The infection from brain to brain, from consciousness to consciousness respectively from thought to thought and from feeling to feeling works like a virus attack, which is why we can also speak of thought-viruses and feeling-viruses, but this is only a comparison.

All behaviour patterns of human beings have an infectious effect on their fellow human beings and can spread like an epidemic or in the worst case even like a pandemic. Infection occurs through the spreading of views and opinions as well as through thoughts and feelings, deeds and actions that are perceived and appropriated by human beings. Consequently, the infection results from the uncontrolled adoption or acceptance of other human beings' views, opinions, thoughts, feelings, actions, deeds, actions and other forms of behaviour, respectively, which are also carried out and maintained. And depending on how human beings perceive their self-responsibility and self-control, the incubation period of the thought-feeling-virus-infection until the outbreak lasts shorter or longer. If, however, self-responsibility and self-control is cultivated to the best possible extent, a reaction to the 'virus attack' can be a long time in coming or, in the very best case, not at all. However, the rule of thumb for human beings on Earth is that they are only too happy to be infected by the behaviour of their fellow human beings. It is not important whether this happens in a direct or indirect way, directly from human being to human being or over many corners and distances, via media through newspaper reports, radio or television broadcasts, telephone calls or rumours and slander etc. It is a fact that the manifold behaviours of human beings, be it love, hatred, thoughts and feelings of contentment, dissatisfaction, freedom, peace, harmony and revenge, retribution, happiness, fierceness, gentleness, courage, fear and cowardice, as well as war, dishonesty, aggressiveness and violence etc., spread to human beings like an infectious disease. With regard to all these factors, there is a very high potential for infection among the human beings of the Earth, because they are oriented towards the behavioural impulses of others, assimilate them and thus make them their own.

The truth is that dissatisfied human beings are grumpy, hostile, malicious, aggressive and often even violent towards others, seeking revenge and revenge, and are full of hatred and cold feelings, unscrupulous, disharmonious and hostile. Satisfied human beings, however, meet others with love, peace, harmony, joy, freedom, generosity and helpfulness as well as with compassion, etc. This behaviour usually causes an increased dopamine release in the brain, which stimulates and strengthens their feeling of happiness and leads to the same patterns of behaviour that are shown to them. The patterns of behaviour can be very diverse, as has already been explained, and even patterns are transmitted that are hardly considered possible. So when thoughts and feelings and actual forms of behaviour are transferred from a human being to fellow human beings respectively have such an infectious effect like bacteria and viruses that infect illnesses, then it is also true that much more is the case. It is obvious that in this way also behavioural patterns are transmitted such as cosmetic surgery, sports needs and obesity as well as religious and sectarian beliefs, fanaticism, extremism, destructive fury, recklessness, wantonness and the injuring or killing of human beings and animals etc. If human beings are like this, in whose circle others live who are addicted to these things, then the probability increases that they themselves are also infected by it and are also addicted to the same things and live them out. In fact, newspaper, radio and television broadcasts describing such things are enough for human beings to become infected by them and then to adapt their behaviour accordingly. The infection resp. contagion occurs simply because human beings imitate the behaviour patterns resp. habits of others and adopt them themselves. Their own perception changes drastically, and through this the behaviour pattern of others is accepted and made one's own. In this way, human beings hammer into themselves a view or opinion as well as thoughts and feelings which fundamentally do not correspond to their own, but are accepted and imitated. Thus unconsciously and subconsciously patterns of behaviour arise which do not only have an effect on the individual human being but which even cause a social respectively a general infection, consequently whole groups or small and large masses of people are affected.

Human beings are thus infected by the thoughts and feelings and by the behaviour patterns of others as by a contagious disease virus, whereby the patterns of love and happiness, of joy, freedom and harmony, etc. range from dissatisfaction, revenge and retribution to evil violence and murder. All these and also all other patterns of behaviour mentioned so far have an infectious effect like bacteria and viruses, but the incubation period from infection to outbreak varies in length depending on the character and personality as well as the self-responsibility and self-control of the human being, usually only seconds in the fast case, but in the slower case it is much longer than with an infectious disease. If violence is now specifically assumed along with all other behavioural patterns, then it follows that a human being who experiences and experiences it personally runs a very high risk of committing a violent act himself sooner or later. The possibility of committing an act of violence is more than twice as high as it is for a human being who has not experienced violence. The experience of violence does not even have to have taken place in one's own body, but it is sufficient if violence is witnessed. It is a fact that every violent crime, like any other pattern of behaviour, triggers a real cascade of subsequent violence. If a human being experiences a violent confrontation, be it on his own body or just by observing it, then this has much more influence on future violent tendencies of a human being than it is the case with all other manifold factors respectively patterns of behaviour, because violence is the worst form of behaviour a human being can be affected by. If children are confronted with violence due to a wrong upbringing or environmental circumstances, then this usually follows them all their lives, so they become violent again and again. It is a fact that even poverty, alcohol, drugs and medication only play a subordinate role compared to one's own life of violence. Violence is indeed contagious, and in a way that infects the brain as if it were a dangerous virus, because every experience of violence is stored in the brain, whether it is experienced and lived out in one's own body or just passively observed. In the brain respectively in the amygdala, in the emotional memory centre, the traumatic experience and the experience of violence is anchored, which results in the fact that this memory is used in a critical situation and is used to exert violence itself. This is precisely because the stored memory is geared to the fact that a critical or dangerous situation can be resolved by violence. And if a crisis situation actually occurs, then the 'violence-infected' person automatically exerts violence in some way, snaps and strikes. But this happens faster and more radically than a human being who has not yet had an active or passive experience of violence can do.

Not only violence is contagious, as has already been explained, but also fear, abdominal pain, sweating, shortness of breath, loneliness, happiness, love, crying, laughing, joy and jealousy, as well as suicide, obesity, murder, sports, greed, torture and torment, smoking, non-smoking, greed, pain and stinginess, etc. and all kinds of thoughts and feelings and all the patterns of behaviour mentioned earlier. Regarding suicide, suicide is as contagious as a flu epidemic, although in the age of the Internet, this has taken on a global dimension. Those who commit suicide through Internet connections do so through contact with like-minded people who do not know each other personally. This proves that social contagion obviously does not require personal contact to be effective. Thoughts, feelings, behaviour patterns and even diseases can also be spread via online networks, so the future looks very bleak in this respect. Of course, the rapidly growing online networks do not increase the infection potential itself, but they do ensure that a much faster infection and a faster worldwide spread of a thought-feeling epidemic and behavioural pattern epidemic occurs. Through the Internet, thousands and even hundreds of thousands of human beings can thus be infected by a thought-feeling and behaviour virus in a very short time and trigger a dangerous behaviour pattern pandemic, the dynamics of which are not to be found in any flu epidemic. Even deaths can occur due to the failure of internal organs, as a nocebo effect, which occurs when corresponding patterns of thoughts and feelings act on human beings through thoughts and feelings and trigger the corresponding lethal factors. These can all spread like an epidemic among human beings and be contagious, thus creating 'mass infections', as it were, and the social network of society plays a very important role in this. And that this is indeed the case is proven time and again, for example, by football fanaticism, as well as by hooligan and demonstration shows and extremist neo-Nazi groups, terrorist suicide bombers and religious-sectarian mass suicides, etc. It is only through some sort of predetermined pattern of behaviour of an individual or several human beings that it is possible for thoughts and feelings to develop into 'viruses' which, like poisonous pathogens, quickly spread and infect others. Thus, in the way that human beings assume and imitate the behaviour patterns of others, one brain can infect other brains, whereby the incubation period from infection to outbreak can happen within seconds, but can also last longer, as has already been explained. The symptoms that occur can last for minutes, hours or days, even weeks, months and years, or even the whole life.

With regard to the fact that a human being is infected with violence, a passive experience of violence in childhood is sufficient, as already explained, in which an act of violence is therefore only observed.

Basically, the virus-like transfer of behaviour patterns from one human being to another is often a very serious epidemic. This is especially the case when it is a matter of mass hysteria, from which very unpleasant and dangerous consequences can arise. A 'mass infection' in this way is like a dangerous disease, in which human beings are infected by thoughts, feelings, emotions and behaviour patterns, whether they are negative or positive. The brain with consciousness is the decisive factor, because that is where the whole thing comes from. Basically, the human brain is a social organ in which structures are created that adapt relatively quickly to other human beings and their behaviour patterns. Particularly in emotionally strong, stressful and emotional situations, the human brain uses every opportunity and possibility to share its own work with other brains of fellow human beings. It is a fact that when two human beings meet, their brains throw out their biochemical grappling hooks and build bridges between them. In this way, they save energy on the one hand, and on the other hand these bridges pave the way for social contagion of moods and behaviours, regardless of whether the human beings in question are stable or unstable in terms of health. In this way, social networks with family members, partners, friends and acquaintances, as well as with strangers, lead to brain connections, which then form the key to joy, happiness and sociability, as well as to joylessness, unhappiness and loneliness, etc. Loneliness, however, has nothing to do with being alone, as many human beings confuse and misunderstand. Loneliness is a state of being alone for oneself, in which a human being is alone because he wants to be alone or has to be alone. Loneliness, on the other hand, is based on the fact that human beings have thoughts and feelings that make them separate them from all external influences, make them feel alone and abandoned and do not cultivate any connecting contacts with their fellow human beings. Depending on the thoughts and feelings, one human being feels lonely more often and more quickly than another, whereby acceptance and imitation also play a very important role. Especially very sensitive human beings feel lonely very quickly, often because they feel misunderstood by others and feel that they have been treated wrongly and trivially. This leads them to isolate themselves from the environment and to go away in cloudy, evil thoughts and feelings, which of course promotes their state of loneliness even more. But not enough with that, because even if it sounds paradoxical, the radiated loneliness acts like a poisonous virus on the fellow men, consequently the whole thing is transferred to them. And the worst thing about it is that it is precisely where the interpersonal contacts are very close, such as in the family, in the circle of friends and acquaintances or in a smaller or larger group of human beings, that the symptoms of loneliness are expressed very strongly and have a contagious effect. As a result, loneliness can spread within a group or in society like a nasty ulcer. For as soon as a human being feels lonely within a family, circle of friends or acquaintances, or in a smaller or larger group, the risk increases that others will also slowly but surely begin to feel lonely, with the risk of others being infected being over 50 percent. The whole thing creates a kind of cycle of isolation, and when a human being feels lonely, he inevitably behaves negatively towards others. This usually leads to a situation where, if there is not an infection, the other people turn away from the lonely human beings, whereby those who turn away are naturally disappointed, but this has the negative effect that they then unconsciously begin to avoid the lonely human being and treat him unfairly. In this way many friendships break up, not only direct contacts, but gradually the whole social network is infected by it and falls into bad ways.

Semjase Silver Star Centre, 29th May 2010, 00:26hrs 'Billy'.

When an embryo is first conceived, it is only animated by an impulse based Creation Energy, like a plant, only on the 21st day does the reincarnated part piece of Creation Energy with the new consciousness block and personality enter the Colliculus Superior, and the software so to speak is uploaded. Unfortunately, at the present time on Earth we enter a world full of irrationality and confused behaviour, being bombarded with massive impulse waves of materialism, thousands of delusional religions/sects and a perplexing number of differing ideologies and philosophies, which have led to countless differing ideas on who we are, what we are and how to live, nearly all of which bear any semblance to the actual truth and its reality.

As children grow, they are constantly exposed to the negative and overly positive vibrations surrounding them and emanating from parents, family, friends, peers, and society at large who have also been led into the unreal and float around on the ocean of life with no clear direction, but simply being swept around by prevailing currents and winds.

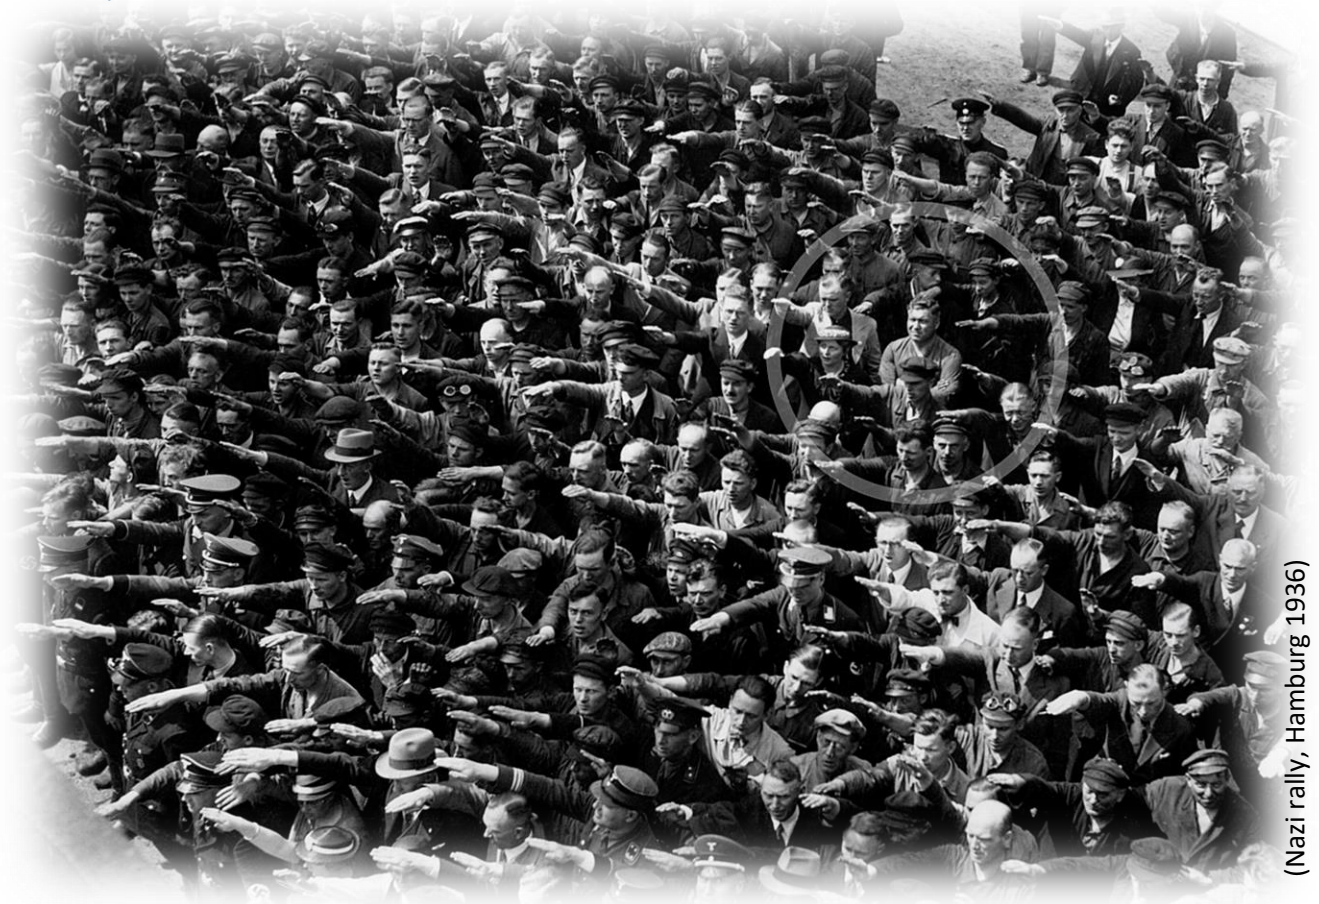

Today, if you look at individual countries and their societies nearly all are divided up and fractured by their differing false beliefs, mainly through cultish irrational teachings but also through materialistic ideals giving humans a false sense of life, based in material and monetary achievements, the eternal truth of our Creation and the Creation Energy within us being forgotten, suppressed, or ignored.

Most people on Earth due to their incorrect thoughts are stunted in their evolutionary progress with their pineal gland remaining in an atrophied state, which is increasingly leading to an inability to think and especially in a logical and rational way. Parents educate their children in the same way they have been taught, constantly reinforcing false beliefs, with no sign of truth and reality being allowed to make an appearance in the material consciousness, and diminishing our capacity to freely think without prejudice.

As Earth's population continues to expand unchecked, so more and more humans are assimilating these behavioural impulses, constantly instilling in themselves opinions, thoughts, and feelings not of their own making but nevertheless adding to the growth and expansion of incorrect impulsations, being fed into the We-Subconscious.

Those in positions of power and control, do not want you to think but only to obey, and if they also control the rhetoric can persuade an entire nation and the people therein that they are superior to other human beings, and that only their ideology is correct and needs to be imposed on the rest of humanity, no matter the cost in human lives. Only an equalised, clear and logical examination of one's own thoughts generated by the impulsations brought into the material consciousness via the WE-Subconscious, can allow you to remain impartial, something which can take a lot of courage if all around you have been brainwashed.

(Nazi rally, Hamburg 1936)

(Goblet of Truth p.431)

55) You humankind of Earth, finally wake up and become yourselves, bring forth in yourselves your own decisions and be therefore free in your thoughts and feelings, so that you shatter all dogmatic walls in you and pull down the bandage of the belief in gods, demons, angels, sublime ones, tin gods and human idols which makes you unseeing, so that you finally become seeing and can perceive the light of the truth in an un mutilated wise.

56) And if you do this, you will rejoice in yourselves and swing your consciousness through the cognition of the truth into the heights, to find the true love in the Creation and in its completion that is the highest possible for you, which your intellect does not know, because of the captivity of your belief with regard to religions, ideologies, philosophies and their irrational teachings.

57) You must recognise, you humankind of Earth, that you, in the form of your spirit-form in you, are a minute part of the all-embracing Creation, which is why you shall unify yourselves with it through your consciousness, namely by turning to the truth of all truth and as a result give enough consideration to your consciousness evolution; free yourselves with your whole energy and power from your truth-unknowledgeness and give yourselves the gift of the truth-recognition and truth-following, through which you find your way out of the chaos and rise up to the higher in yourselves, which makes you joyful of your life, fills you with true love and creates peace, freedom and harmony in you and amongst your whole humankind.

A sense of community

by Jonathan Steven

This morning I sat down to write my contribution towards the FIGU-England annual newsletter. I had put aside this time specifically so I could reflect and hopefully articulate some pearls of wisdom gained from a number of recent, interesting experiences. The intent being that I could share these experiences and my associated learning with the wider FIGU community and any other interested individuals who may happen upon this article with enough curiosity to read it.

However, events today have overtaken me. I write this article on the morning of Friday 9th September. Queen Elizabeth II has died, succeeded by Charles, her son who has inherited the throne.

I live in a quintessentially English village in the South-East of England. A traditional church dating from the Norman conquest of England in 1066 overlooks the village green where the crack of bat against cricket ball is still regularly heard on sleepy, warm summer Sunday afternoons. The British Legion, Women's Institute and Horticultural society continue to thrive and be an integral part of village life. Although the Covid pandemic feels less imposing and urgent now, the challenges of that time continue to be felt and a surprisingly enhanced sense of community is tending to endure from that which was prevalent beforehand.

Today there is undoubtedly a sombre feel to the village. People are going about their everyday business as normal yet there is a notable quietness and a seriousness clearly evident that is not at all normal. The death of the Queen will undoubtedly be global news and not just limited to England or rather should I say, Britain. Whether your personal politics are that of monarchism or republicanism I believe a huge number of people respected her for the way she conducted herself in her role. I believe there is a certain undeniability that the Queen lived and personified those better values which define what it means to be British i.e., service, honour, duty, respect, interest in others, and quiet diplomacy.

Today the Queen has reminded me that I am not just part of a village community, and I am not just part of an English community, but I am also part of a British and a commonwealth community. In addition, I am also part of a global community.

Unfortunately, our global community is seeing serious division. The war in Ukraine continues to drag on and disagreement over Taiwan is generating another serious geopolitical flashpoint. The world appears to be dividing again into two power blocks, this time one led by the G7 countries (Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the United States, and the European Union) and the other the BRICS countries (Brazil, Russia, India, China, and South Africa).

I am deeply saddened that our global community is being split in this way. One-sided, partisan thinking is developing and becoming common on both sides of the emerging ideological divide. A neutral, balanced thinking which considers all sides of a problem, or a dispute is essential for any sort of lasting resolution. For example, if in the west you think the Russian invasion of the Ukraine was unprovoked, what is your viewpoint then on the documented training and arming of neo-Nazi paramilitary terrorist groups in Eastern Ukraine by NATO? Alternatively, if in the East you think the Russian invasion of Ukraine, a sovereign nation state, was a justifiable strategic move, what is your viewpoint on how this worked out from a humanitarian and strategic perspective in Afghanistan and Iraq for Western forces? Unfortunately, neutral, balanced thinking appears to currently be a rare commodity in today's increasingly polarised world. Perhaps increased use of the Queen's respected skill of quiet diplomacy might bring more success if applied more widely to issues whether they be of a global or of a more mundane nature.

There is another community that we are all members of which is almost completely ignored by the mainstream humanity on Earth and that is we are all part of a universal community.

Although most people are open to the idea that life on other planets is more likely than not, the idea of extra-terrestrials visiting the earth right now and the Earth being one of many planets supporting life continues to be one of science fiction rather than science fact. If anything, global intelligence services have promoted an attitude of derision around this subject so as to minimise any widespread serious consideration of it amongst the public mass.

Billy Meier has produced more quantifiable evidence than any other individual party or organisation as to the existence of extra-terrestrial visitors. Billy works with the Plejaren, an extra-terrestrial race who visit Earth with the intention of teaching and helping Earth humans towards a prosperous, peaceful future. They are apparently one civilisation amongst a number who have joined together and make up the membership of a federation of planets, led by a High Council who govern in the peaceful interest of all.

According to the Plejaren, they are not the only race currently visiting Earth. One other extra-terrestrial race is notably active and visits Earth on a regular basis. In addition, there are apparently two other advanced races that live underground quietly out of the view of the surface population. These two have lived on, or rather within the Earth for a very long time and call the Earth their home as well.

So we not only have our own global, national and local communities we are part of a much wider universal community as well. The extra-terrestrial communities are much closer than is currently realised and the potential for first contact is also much greater than is currently realised. These extra-terrestrial communities are not currently, openly engaging with Earth humanity as they are, in the main, waiting for Earth humanity to evolve sufficiently whereby an open, peaceful relationship beneficial for both sides can become viable.

The success of our introduction into the wider universal community will therefore undoubtedly go much more smoothly if we demonstrate more of those values role-modelled by the Queen such as dignity, respect and quiet diplomacy. Impulsive behaviour, anger, violence, and an inability to bring peace and diplomatic solutions to our own problems such as in the Ukraine and Taiwan should be considered not just from a planetary perspective but from an interplanetary one as well. The Plejaren have advised that Earth humanity is being closely monitored by the other at-the-moment invisible extra-terrestrial groups. Due to the significant planetary risk posed by the arsenal of nuclear weapons held by Earth-based nations they are prepared under specific circumstances to reveal themselves and neutralise any apocalyptic threat should it materialise. If they do this, the focus of their activity would be to neutralise aggression by the United States. Considering how advanced the technology wielded by these civilisations allegedly is, this warning should be considered as a serious wake-up call for the West.

The Queen has highlighted for me today that we are all part of a community. FIGU-England is also part of the worldwide FIGU community which has at its heart the aim to promote a healthy and harmonious community of nations on Earth that can grow and develop in peace solving our problems together so that ultimately one day we can reach out and travel to the stars. Surely that is something we can all agree on and something that we can all work on together.

1st Annual Retreat FIGU England

12-14 May 2023

Community retreat and renewal in the heart of nature.

For more details, please see figu-england.info

Registration Open